New Anti-Saloon League.
Wicked Russia, Again.
We Get Used to Things.
What Is India to Us?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SOME "BIG MEN" among the drys, observing the rush to wetness, think something must be done to offset the big wet names that have come out against prohibition.

It worries them to see the Republican and Democratic candidates for governor both wet in New Jersey. Thomas A. Edison, Gifford Pinchot and William Gibbs McAdoo are among those that will protect prohibition from its enemies.

THE "BIG ONES" are said to feel that the Anti-Saloon League and the churches are no longer equal to the task of keeping the dry amendment in the Constitution.

That is a mistaken notion. There is more prohibition power in the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches and Sunday schools than in all the big names in the country. Separate prohibition from religion and it will be as helpless as a small child lost in a great city.

BRITAIN DISCOVERS that Russia employs slave or convict labor, and is shocked, now that Russia undersells Manchester. Russia replies:

"Well, you pay your workers just enough to keep alive and go on working. What is the difference?"

And Russia continues her sinful practices, actually competing with and underselling the "capitalistic" countries.

The latest news affects cotton growers. Russia has sold, at Liverpool, 163,000 small bales of cotton, from Turkestan, at $3 a bale below our cheap price.

There may be something in the suggestion of a distinguished British economist that Britain and America lend Russia money, thus making it unnecessary for her to dump goods at any price, to continue her industrial plan.

WHILE COL. LINDBERGH prepares for his trans-Pacific flight which he calls "a vacation trip," Wilkins starts with his submarine for the North Pole.

The human mind soon becomes accustomed to what happens often. Once torture of witnesses in court and torturing to death of criminals attracted little attention. Now we scarcely look up when airplanes pass. Even the sight of a giant dirigible is only mildly exciting.

A courageous man starts for the North Pole planning to travel under the ice, perhaps 100 feet thick, in his submarine, and we say, "Indeed, so interesting." But in history such feats take their proper places in the story in men's progress from the cave and from the bow and arrow toward civilization.

NEW YORK gentlemen, including professional "enemies of England," give a dinner as a long-distance testimonial to Gandhi, who "listens in."

One gentleman says this country must help India gain her freedom.

How? If the Hindus and Mohammedans in India cannot stop fighting and murdering each other, must we put Uncle Sam's finger in the door jamb?

THERE ARE more than three hundred millions in India, fewer than forty millions in the British islands. India can be free, when she decides to gain her freedom as our ancestors got theirs. One man at the dinner praised Gandhi because "he would sacrifice his nation's hope of independence, rather than commit one act of violence."

Must we go over and commit the acts of violence for him?

Why not make it a rule to let other nations attend to their business and wars? Providence knows what is best for all and can interfere if it chooses. Since divine wisdom refrains from meddling, let us, also, refrain.

MR. COOLIDGE, who thinks deeply, quotes Henry Ward Beecher in a statement that our system of government and business is a failure. When Beecher was told that Christianity had failed he replied, "It has never been tried."

MR. COOLIDGE observes that the Sermon on the Mount is neglected even after 2,000 years of preaching. Our social and religious systems are sound, but we human beings are imperfect.

We are also dull. We have millions idle money and capacity for production unlimited, and we do not know what to do with the money, storing it in piles of gold.

TOMORROW THIS government could raise 10 billions. More than seven billions were offered Mr. Mellon a few days ago, when he asked for $800,000,000, paying only 3⅛ per cent interest.

We have it, but do not know how to use it, all of our intelligence being trained in accumulation, none in distribution.

POPE PIUS maintains his firm stand, in the face of hostile government action. After closing all Catholic societies, the action based on charges of political conspiracy against the Fascist government, the Vatican is told that clubs for Catholic women may reopen, but not Catholic clubs for men.

Pope Pius refuses this concession, saying it must be all or none.

THE SUN was still shining in Wall street yesterday. Prices continued crawling timidly upward. Some bears "covered," remembering that there is no limit to the heights to which prices can climb.

One man who sold a railroad stock short, because it had climbed 200 points in a few days and he "knew it was silly," will never forget his sensations, as it climbed 700 points more.

That will not happen, just now, however.

CHIEFS LAUNCH FIGHT AGAINST EVICTIONS

Montour Strikers Advised To Refuse to Quit Homes; Picketing on Increase

BULLETIN.

Tear gas, used by deputy sheriffs, today broke up two demonstrations by striking miners in Washington County. When strikers are said to have stoned a bus at the Soudan mine, near Van Vorhis, deputy sheriffs charged a crowd of 400, releasing tear gas.

At the Francis mine, near Burgettstown, two miners were attacked on their way to work. A crowd of 500 collected, which was broken up when deputies rushed the mob, using tear gas.

Calling upon the striking miners at Montour No. 10 mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company to fight eviction by refusing to leave their homes, leaders of the National Miners' Union today sought to instill a militant policy into the bituminous controversy while officials of the United Mines Workers and federal and state conciliators of labor attempted to bring about peace.

Latest developments in the two-phase controversy were:

1—United Mine Workers' officials announced voluntary return of hundreds of strikers into the union which expelled them in 1927 because of activity in the dual organization.

2—National Miners' Union leaders of the walkout refuse to arbitrate their grievances through federal or state conciliators, claiming they will deal only with employers.

3—Numerous organizations meetings announced by United Mine Workers in districts where National Miners' Union contends it is in control.

4—National Union scale committee meeting in Pittsburgh to discuss presentation of formal demands to coal operators.

Strikers from the Kinloch mine of the Valley Camp Coal Company, near New Kensington, last night forced a truck carrying nine men from the road about a mile from the mine, injuring one man severely and causing bruises to several others, it was reported here. Paul Kaiser, 39, of Blevins street, North Side, was taken to Citizens General Hospital.

CLAIM DISPUTED

Frank Patterson, 35, of 2030 Mountford street, driver of the truck, told state police his truck was forced from the road into a ditch. State police said their investigation indicated that the truck was not forced from the road, but that the driver lost control.

At Montour Mine No. 10, of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, Library, between 1,100 and 1,200 men, women and children were on the picket line in this morning's massed demonstration, more than double those of the initial demonstration.

Stillman Gives Ex-Wife Blessing Before Sailing On Voyage to Europe

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 6.—While his vivacious former wife, Anne, was honeymooning with her youthful new husband, Fowler McCormick, James A. Stillman, former president of the National City Bank, sailed for Europe early today on the White Star liner Olympic.

Thus was written an amazing new chapter in the most sensational divorce story in the annals of American wealth and society.

Mrs. McCormick is past 50. Her husband is 32. James A. Stillman is past 60.

COUPLE HAPPY

Fowler and Fifi Potter Stillman McCormick were tucked away today at an ocean-side cottage in East Hampton, L. I., accompanied by only a few servants. Both appeared happy and anxious to escape from outside contacts. Neither would express any other than good wishes for Stillman. And in his stateroom on the Olympic, the millionaire banker expressed the same sentiments.

Smiling as genially as ever, Stillman said he wished his former wife and her young husband all the luck in the world. He said:

"I am not married and do not intend to get married. As for my former wife, she is thoroughly capable of speaking for herself."

There was a bit of a chuckle accompanying this.

Asked if he was surprised at the news of his former wife having married young McCormick, Stillman said:

"I am not surprised at anything these days."

Despite Stillman's attitude as to his future marital plans, he appeared much concerned when an employe of the steamship company referred to "your other cabin." Stillman hastened to add:

"I am traveling alone."

Stillman gave the impression of a boy released for a holiday. He said:

"I am glad it is all over. It is not pleasant to have one's private affairs become the concern of the public. The publicity which has been my lot is na-

BLOW POLICE WHISTLE TO HALT AUTO

Oakmont Contractor on Way To Pay Workers Robbed Near East Pittsburgh

When he stopped his machine on the McKeesport boulevard just outside of East Pittsburgh, in response of the blowing of a police whistle, Vincent Costello, 43, an Oakmont contractor, was held up and robbed of a $1,380.05 cash payroll by two masked and armed bandits this morning.

Costello withdrew the money from an Oakmont bank to pay off his men, who had finished a sewer job in Monessen. He noticed a machine following him after he left the bank, but thought nothing of it until one of the bandits blew a police whistle and their car swung ahead of his and blocked the road.

While one of the robbers sat at the wheel, the other, a black mask covering his face, approached Costello's car, and thrusting a gun against his ribs, commanded him to leave the car.

The bandit searched Costello, obtained the money, jumped into his own machine and fled. The license plates were covered with rags.

Three machines with armed county detectives were guarding roads in the vicinity in an effort to capture the bandits.

At the time of the holdup, while Costello had his hands raised above his head, a machine passed but the occupants did not notice his predicament.

After the robbers left he ran to a confectionary store on Dixon street, North Versailles township, and told the proprietor to notify the police.

FECHET, EAKER CRASH IN PLANE

TAPACHULA, Mexico, June 6.—(INS.)—Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the United States Air Corps, and Pilot Capt. Ira T. Eaker narrowly escaped serious injury here today when their plane crashed while attempting a landing.

The two men were badly shaken when the ship in which they were flying to Panama nosed over into the ground, breaking the propeller. They said they would continue their journey as soon as a new propeller reaches them from Mexico City.

Capt. Eaker was one of the pilots of the "Question Mark," Army plane first to establish an endurance record by refueling.

Gunman Slays Bradford Gang Story Writer

BRADFORD, Pa., June 6.—(AP.)—A long chain of racket murders was being linked together by city and county authorities today as they sought solution of the slaying here yesterday of Al Ritchie, one-time aide to a New York county prosecutor, roadhouse proprietor, bootlegger and author of magazine articles on gang warfare.

And material for a book Ritchie planned to write, in which he was to describe gang killings on the Pennsylvania-New York border, was sought in the hope that it might throw light on Ritchie's murder.

Ritchie was shot down by a gunman who fired from an automobile in the business district here yesterday as the victim and several friends were leaving a public square after listening to an address by Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army.

Police officials said they were convinced the Ritchie slaying was another chapter to the long list of gang killings that has totaled a score in little more than two years.

SHOW GIRL SUES FOR $600,000

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—A suit for $600,000 damages filed by Ruth Taylor, former "Follies" girl, against Jervis R. Harbeck, director and officer of several large corporations, was disclosed in Supreme Court yesterday when Harbeck filed a reply to Miss Taylor's charges that he jilted her after seven years.

In his reply, Harbeck denied Miss Taylor's allegations, but admitted knowing her and giving her money with which to buy a house in Great Neck, L. I. He also said that Miss Taylor was aware he was married and that her suit was outlawed by the "statute of limitations."

Miss Taylor alleged Harbeck gave her a diamond ring at one time, later placing a wedding ring on her finger, saying "We are married in the eyes of God."

Miss Taylor charged it cost her and Harbeck $50,000 a year to live together from 1922 to 1927.

Senator Wheeler Supports Hearst Job Relief Plan

SEATTLE, June 6.—(Universal.)—William Randolph Hearst's plan for a $5,000,000,000 loan to launch a program of internal improvements won praise from Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, a Seattle visitor. He said:

"There is no question that such a move would be of immense benefit in lifting us from depression."

Beyond the question of public works are a number of "fundamental issues" calling for settlement, Senator Wheeler believes.

The power problem, the Montana Progressive contends, will be one of the dominant issues in the 1932 presidential campaign. He said:

"Not millions, but billions of water were pumped into power securities."

Wheeler, definitely committed to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, for President, said:

"If the election were today, Roosevelt would be elected overwhelmingly."

CAPONE FACES 50-YEAR PRISON TERM IN TAX EVASION

GANGSTER KING DENIES HE'LL ADMIT GUILT

Glumly Posts $50,000 Bond For Trial on 22 Charges; Aide Starts Term in Pen

International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 6.—Al Capone, America's gangster king, was under $50,000 bond today for income tax evasion and sadly contemplated that money talks, but in this case talked back.

Three years of investigation crystallized into three hours of fast action yesterday and Scarface Al discovered that federal investigators, scores of them, had been prying into his most secret affairs and that he owed the government back taxes of $215,000. He is also liable to an $80,000 fine and if found guilty on all 22 counts contained in the indictments returned against him by the federal grand jury he may have to serve 50 years in Leavenworth Penitentiary.

At 2 o'clock the indictments were returned and three hours later Al, in company with lawyers and bondsmen, surrendered and was released.

Grand jury proofs indicated that Al had a net income of $1,038,654 from 1924 to 1929, inclusive, but this was not regarded as being the sum of the millions he is popularly supposed to have made from his various rackets, beer the chief one.

Capone is now under $5,000 bail to the Federal Court on a charge of contempt of court, which may bring him a six-month sentence before the present case comes to trial.

On reports that he would plead guilty in the hope of getting a light sentence, he said:

"There's nothing to it."

$2,500,000,000 SLASHED FROM 1931 PAYROLLS

Federation Estimates Cost of Unemployment and Wage Cuts; Warn of Winter

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP.)—An estimate that a combination of wage cuts, part-time employment and unemployment, cost workers more than $2,500,000,000 in wages during the first months of 1931 was announced last night by the American Federation of Labor.

Both President William Green, of the federation, and Secretary of Labor William N. Doak said separately, however, that the losses due to wage cuts—known to have affected more than 125,000 workers in factories alone—had not been caused by large employers of labor. Doak said:

"The wage standard has been holding up well and I believe the larger firms should be congratulated. Although nearly 200 establishments, employing nearly 23,000 workers, cut wages in April, this is a small percentage compared to the total number of firms and workers throughout the country. The wage sniping appears to be of a local nature."

Agreeing that large employers "are in general maintaining wage rates and intend to continue," Green reiterated a recent statement that workers should organize to combat any cut—and go on strike if necessary.

It warned also that the improvement of employment during the spring was "little more than half the normal" and that steps should be taken to provide relief for next winter.

Hoover Sees Increase In Federal Workers

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP.)—President Hoover expects an increase of 150,000 by September in the number of persons employed by the government. He made this announcement last night before leaving for his Rapidon camp, where he is conferring today with Navy officials on economy measures.

The chief executive said that the total number of persons now regularly employed and those hired for construction work was 1,556,000. Of this number 901,000, including the Army and Navy, are under regular employment.

HOUSTON DUE TO TESTIFY ON CITY BUYING

Grocer Whose Letter Started Food Investigation Called Among First Witnesses

That John D. Houston, of the James W. Houston Company, will be one of the first to testify when the grand jury investigation of the City Department of Supplies opens, is the report from reliable sources.

A county detective took a subpena to Houston's office, but it was made out for James W. Houston, former head of the firm, who died a number of years ago. John D. Houston, whose letter to City Council started the investigation in the Department of Supplies, is attending a commencement at Haverford where his son is being graduated.

Houston has said on several occasions that he would be glad to testify before the grand jury. Summons were also reported served on a number of the officials of the L. H. Parke Company, the firm which Houston complained received large city food contracts at other than low bids during the time when Bertram L. Succop was director of the department.

Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt said much of the early part of the grand jury session will be taken up with the testimony of Main & Co.

Witnesses will not be excused by pleading ignorance of the facts, according to Attorney Earl F. Reed, who will be appointed special prosecutor. It is believed that about 100 persons will be called.

Reed said:

"No witnesses will be excused who have been subpenaed except in case of mistaken identity, although we are willing to discuss testimony of witnesses in advance, and accomodate as far as possible as to the time of calling them."

It is not expected that the grand jury will get started on the case before June 15 due to the heavy court calendar.

Controller James P. Kerr received late yesterday a report of the audit of the City Department of Supplies made by Price, Waterhouse & Co.

Three copies of the report were delivered to Controller Kerr. He said he would forward one to District Attorney Andrew T. Park, one to Mayor Charles H. Kline and the third to Council.

Controller Kerr declared that he had not read the report and therefore could not make any comment on the finding.

COLVIN SCORES TRIP CRITICS

Assistant District Attorney William H. Colvin declares he believes that criticism directed against his trip to Atlantic City to testify for John Lazarro, former operator of the Flotilla Club, seeking to open a cabaret there, is unwarranted.

John D. Pennington, prohibition administrator, was quoted as taking Colvin to task for his role as character witness for Lazarro. Colvin said:

"So far as I know, Lazarro operated entirely within the law in Pittsburgh. Had he broken it, I would have gone to New Jersey to help prosecute him, instead of to testify for him. He was a client of mine from 1925 to 1929."

He explained that the Atlantic City cabaret was not padlocked while Lazarro was operating it, but after the latter had obtained a lease on the premises.

Coolidge Sees Benefit In Stimson Trip Abroad

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 6.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The proposed visit of Secretary Stimson to several countries in Europe reminds us that governments do not depend so much as formerly on the reports of diplomats but are most disposed to take up important questions by direct personal contact between those in authority. The chancellor of Germany is about to visit the prime minister of England, who in turn not long ago came here to confer with President Hoover. The prime minister of Canada paid this country a like compliment.

Mr. Coolidge

No way is so effective for finding out the difficulties and opinions of the other fellow and candidly disclosing to him your own as through a personal interview. Much can be said that would never be put in a diplomatic dispatch. That basis of good understanding which the world so much needs today is deficient because those in authority do not have a first-hand knowledge of the people and conditions with which they are attempting to deal.

This method is easier for Europe, where capitals are not far apart, than it is for us. But our Secretary of State ought to go abroad each year to make personal acquaintance if he has little requiring diplomatic adjustment.

Vet Leader Charges U. S. Makes Profit on Bonus

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 6.—(AP.)—Paul C. Wolman, of Baltimore, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars charged in an address last night that the federal government was making a profit from adjusted compensation legislation.

Wolman said he was prepared to go before the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee and offer proof that the government is borrowing money at from 1 to 3⅛ per cent, and in turn lending it to veterans at 4½ per cent.

Wolman, addressing approximately 400 persons at a Chamber of Commerce dinner, criticized Secretary Andrew Mellon, of the Treasury Department, for what he termed the secretary's opposition to the compensation legislation.

KANE, IGNORING ROW OVER PAINTINGS, TO CONTINUE CAREER

TRUST IN SELF AND PUBLIC UNSHAKEN

Denies Deliberate Attempt to Deceive by Coloring Photos; Friends Stand By

John Kane, artist, continued in his simple Scotch path today, oblivious to the clamor raised about the discovery that some of his paintings are but colored photographs.

Declaring that all his best work, all his work on canvas is free hand and original composition, Kane's faith in himself, his trust in the goodness of the public, was unshaken. Aged, frail of health, lined and wrinkled by inherited Scotch fortitude and a life of hardship, he said:

WOULD HAVE TOLD

"I won't do it any more. If anyone had thought to ask me, I'd have told them those few were photographs.

"I won't stop painting. It's in me—it has to come out. After all, I'm happy and I'm doing what I want to do. That's all that counts."

Someone told Kane that Pittsburgh artists are jealous of him. The deep forehead wrinkled in a quizzical frown and his quiet voice asked:

"Why should they be jealous?"

He didn't understand, and it was apparent that he couldn't understand. How could people be jealous of his poverty, of his lameness, of his inablity, at times, to buy even canvas.

MEETS FRIENDS

Kane stood, yesterday, in the Junior League headquarters in the Clark Building and met all comers. A simple smile, a firm grip of the hand, and one knew that he was unchanged.

A man approached him—a stranger, colorless, certainly not an artist, with a face as simple and kindly as Kane's own. The stranger said:

"You're Mr. Kane, aren't you? I've always liked your work, and I still do."

The stranger left. Attendants said the occurrence wasn't unusual since the discovery of the few painted photographs. Kane said nothing, looked happy.

'FIFI' AND MATE ON HONEYMOON

turally embarrassing. I wish my former wife nothing but the best of luck and much happiness."

DIFFERENCE IN AGES

During this same period, Mrs. Stillman confided to close friends that Fowler McCormick had repeatedly asked her to marry him, but that she felt there was too much difference in their ages. She said that she had been interested in Fowler only as a nice young boy who was a friend of her son "Bud," who had stood by his mother during the Stillman divorce suit in which Mr. Stillman named Fred Beauvais, Indian guide, as the father of young Guy Stillman.

When the glare of publicity coincident with the Stillman divorce case drove Mrs. Stillman from New York, she went West and spent some time at the McCormick estate.

Later on, Fowler McCormick visited the Stillman camp at Grand Anse, Quebec, as guest of "Bud" Stillman and became still more attached to "Bud's" mother. The difference in their ages did not prove sufficient barrier to halt the growing romance.

During the months when the paternity of "Baby Guy" was being so bitterly disputed in the courts, Fowler aided "Bud" Stillman in accumulating evidence which would aid his mother.

SEES PICTURES

After months of bitter court battles, Mrs. Stillman made a move which later was to result in the end of the paternity fight. She obtained a photograph of little Jay Leeds, son of Stillman and Flo Leeds, former Ziegfeld chorus girl, and placed it upon a table beside a picture of Guy.

Stillman was induced to come to the house and upon seeing the pictures of Jay and Guy together is said to have declared that they looked so much alike that he was satisfied he was father of both.

So, with the paternity question settled, there was a reconciliation of the Stillmans and the harsh charges of the court room were forgotten in a "second honeymoon" to Europe.

But this apparently did not last long. For the divorce complaint upon which Mrs. Stillman won her decree stated Stillman had violated his marriage vows.

During that period of friendship with Fowler McCormick, which occupied the turbulent months of the first Stillman divorce trial, it had become a matter of general knowledge that there was a close bond of sympathy between the middle-aged woman and the school-boy pal of her son.

A few hours before Stillman sailed, his former wife and her husband, Fowler McCormick, were located at East Hampton.

McCormick said:

"We are going to stay around here for some little time—two or three weeks. You know I haven't had a vacation for a long time. Then back to Chicago and to work."

PISTOL FOUND WHERE SLEUTH WAS BEATEN

Heavy Automatic Discovered In Oakland Yard; Detective Recovering in Hospital

A heavy automatic pistol, believed to have been the weapon with which Precinct Detective John McGonigle, of Mt. Washington, was slugged into unconsciousness in Oakland, has been found near where the officer was beaten, police revealed today.

The weapon was found by Maude Aylesworth in the front yard of her home at 316 Semple street late yesterday, several hours after McGonigle had been beaten. The weapon was loaded with a magazine of 11 shots. Police believed it was discarded by the three men who fled after one of their number struck McGonigle in the face.

McGonigle and Patrolman John Whalen and John Kennedy located a stolen car parked at Bates and Semple streets. Nearby were three men entering a taxicab. McGonigle went to question the men while his companions examined the car. As he looked into the taxi, he was knocked unconscious and the three men fled on foot. Patrolman Kennedy and Whalen followed and after firing several shots, captured a man who said he was Abraham Thompson, 22, of 4804 Lytle street.

McGonigle was reported improving today in Mercy Hospital.

Thompson has been held for further investigation while the search for his companions continues.

DENY VATICAN PEACE STEPS

ROME, June 6.—(INS.)—Reports that negotiations between the Vatican and the government concerning their differences had reached the stage of an exchange of proposals were understood today to be groundless.

Both Pope Pius XI and Premier Benito Mussolini were believed to be standing firmly on their original demands. His Holiness demanding that the recently-closed Catholic clubs be reopened, and the Italian leader insisting that they remain dissolved.

Although it was reported yesterday the Pope had spurned a compromise offer that the women's Catholic clubs be reopened, leaving the men's associations in their present state, no official confirmation could be obtained.

'NUMBERS' MEN HEAVILY HIT

The Pittsburgh number racketeers suffered heavy losses yesterday, when 371, played heavily in this district, appeared in the New York stock market totals. It is believed to have been the hardest day for the racket since the stock market discontinued publication of complete figures, in January.

The loss, it was said, probably will put some of the smaller racketeers out of business. Operators of the number racket in numerous cases let it be known that there was something wrong somewhere, as the number was played so heavily. Others said that the number has been played heavily for some time as a favorite.

Wilkins Submarine Speeds Toward London; Radios 'All Well' on Board

BOSTON, June 6.—(INS.)—Carrying Sir Hubert Wilkins on the first leg of his daring North Pole expedition, the submarine Nautilus was speeding through smooth seas today about 300 miles northeast of Boston.

Radio messages from the Coast Guard cutter Pontchartrain, which is acting as a convoy for the undersea craft on the initial period of its Atlantic crossing, were intercepted here by Coast Guard officials. The Nautilus reported all well on board and said good progress was being made with favorable weather prevailing. The Nautilus started its long trip shortly before midnight Thursday from Provincetown, Mass.

Messages from Sir Hubert said the submarine was "behaving well" and even if rough seas were encountered fair speed would be maintained, it was expected.

The Nautilus planned to proceed in a northward direction to a point opposite Halifax before cutting across the Atlantic to London. The submarine will arrive off England the latter part of June.

Mayors Urged To Return to U. S. Battlefields

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Some telegrams to the American mayors now touring the European battlefields:

Come home, we have battlefields of our own.

No more speeches until you consult your lawyer.

You might square things by swimming back.

You can trust us now, as the city treasury is empty.

Reformers have muscled in on your territory.

Don't call the King of England George because that's his name and he resents it.

Why not go to Africa, where you can blame it on the heat?

Be it ever so humbug, there is no place like home.

Acting mayor is acting too much like you.

School house burned down but fortunately all the children were in the movies as usual.

Policeman shot a gangster and was arrested.

Nautilus Crew Gets Rest As 'Iron Mike' Steers

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

By Radio via American Radio News Corporation.

ABOARD SUBMARINE NAUTILUS AT SEA, June 6.—Avoiding the ban of superstition that sailors have about sailing on Friday, the Nautilus weighed anchor and slipped out of Provincetown harbor an hour before midnight Thursday and has proceeded in fine, clear weather throughout the day.

At 9:30 p. m. we are about 250 miles northeast of Boston.

With one engine at work, we are making good headway in a moderately smooth sea. Things are shaking down well on board, but everyone was so exhausted with the strenuous preparations to depart that they deserved and had a small respite today.

Our Sperry compass and automatic "iron mike," an automatic steering gear, is a great boon to the watch on deck. Faithfully the little motor, controlled by the directive force of the master compass, swings the steering gear to left or right, correcting for each jolt on the bow by a wave or a wavering of difference between the two propellors.

Sunshne and moderate seas encourage us to believe that our lucky star is shining. The ship is behaving well and is not likely to be troublesome, we think, even in nasty weather.

Ida Tarbell Denies Lincoln Was 'Jekyl and Hyde'

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—A woman biographer, a German historian and a psychiatrist, all widely known, were on record today as opposed to Dr. A. A. Brill's theory that Abraham Lincoln was a "schizoid-manic" personality.

Dr. Brill's contention that Lincoln was a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde type who succeeded in keeping his baser nature under rigid control was disputed by Ida M. Tarbell, Emil Ludwig and Dr. L. Pierce Clark.

Miss Tarbell said she never has been able to trace to Lincoln any story that could not be repeated to decent-minded persons. Dr. Brill claims Lincoln had a low taste in humor which descended to the obscene.

Dr. Brill expressed his views in a paper which he delivered before a joint session of the American Psychoanalytic and American Psychiatrist Associations in Toronto, Ont., yesterday.

Miss Tarbell said:

"I have sometimes suspected that those who insist on his (Lincoln's) grossness might have been finding what they looked for—and enjoyed—that it was their obscenity rather than his that was behind the story."

Emil Ludwig, in a radio address, said the spirit of Lincoln was the "most beautiful" of the fathers of America he had studied.

BIRTH CONTROL TABOO WITH LUTHERANS

State Synod to Sever Relations With Federal Council of Churches

ALLENTOWN, Pa., June 6.—(INS.)—Birth control and divorce are taboo with the Lutherans of Pennsylvania.

Just before the adjournment of the ministerium convening here, it adopted the following resolution, presented by the Rev. Dr. J. C. Mattes, of Scranton:

"We petition the United Lutheran Church in America to sever its consultative connection with the Federal Council of Churches in America."

The resolution is a protest at the Federal Council's pronouncements on divorce and birth control to which most Lutherans object. Similar action was taken by the United Synod of New York at its convention in New Haven, Conn., during the week.

The ministerium declined to reopen the case of the Rev. M. Leonardi, who five years ago on account of certain irregularities while a pastor in Philadelphia, gave up his ministership and went West.

The determination to meet adequately the demands for the religious element in education, not only through text books, but by promotion of the work of the religious education in the territory on the ministerium, was the feature of the closing session. The synod recommended the introduction of the new "Christian Life Course," in all church schools this fall. Prior to the inaugurating of the new religious course a summer school will be held at Paradise Falls in the Poconos, July 10 to 17, this year.

To The Public:

Our 62nd Anniversary Sale has completed a successful first week—the selling frankly exceeding expectations.

Despite the fact that prices are 15% to 50% lower (the 50% being in the case of furniture) we have had substantial increases in a great many departments.

Our records show, for example, that in the first four days we sold more dresses than were sold in the first six days of last year's Anniversary sale. This is one example of many that can be summed up in the records of the delivery departments, which shows that deliveries so far are in excess of 20% more individual packages than were delivered in last year's sale.

We have opened hundreds of new charge accounts.

These results are gratifying, and prove that people throughout the community are realizing what unparalleled opportunities such a sale as this has for them. Merchandise that measures up to high standards of excellence at prices now that won't buy medicore grades in the future—briefly, that's the story of what our sale means to everybody.

Next week we continue with merchandise stocks replenished, services augmented, and big news for you right through the week.

The items listed on this page are merely examples of hundreds of Anniversary specials in every department of the store. All are on sale tonight until 9 P. M.

Can a Girl With a 'Past' Make a Good Wife?

Can a girl with a "past" make a good wife?

Is the old saying, "Once bad, always bad" true?

Would you take a chance on a girl with a past if you were in Joe's place?

Can you love her and trust her . . . and do you believe she would keep faith with you if you did? Or do you think she'd let you down? Joe's wondering.

Perhaps you've tried trusting a girl like that. If you have, tell him what happened.

NEEDS HELP

Dear Sally:

You have helped so many people that I feel sure you can help me. So here I am "knocking at your door." I hope you won't turn me down. For the last six months I have been going with a girl whom I have learned to care for a lot. I have been thinking things over lately, and I need help to decide what to do. You see, ever since she was 16 she has gone with a wild bunch and has been wild herself. I know she has had "affairs" with a good many boys, and that worries me when I think how much I am growing to care for her.

She says that, since she met me, she's changed . . . that she wants to give up her old life and be a good girl. She claims that she was just a silly kid, and didn't know what she was doing when she started it all. I don't know whether I could trust her or not. Do you think I could?

Do you think it is ever safe to marry a girl like that? I know she doesn't go on wild parties any more because we're together most of the time, and if she did, I'd know it.

IS UNDECIDED

She is very pretty, works hard and claims that she wants to live on the square in the future. She is 19 now . . . and she really is very quiet . . . not like she was when I first knew her at all. Do you think that if I married her she would live up to her good intentions? I do love her a lot and of course I've stepped around myself. I'll admit. But I would hate to have a wife who pulled a raw deal on me.

What do you think? Should I go ahead and marry her? Or should I play safe and drop her? JOE

Well, Joe, you admit you've been no angel yourself. Can you be trusted to give a wife a square deal . . . or can't you? Do you feel that your mistakes should make folks forever suspicious of you? Or do you think that when you've left them behind you, you're entitled to a chance to redeem yourself?

And if a man can "come back," can't a woman?

Of course you know this young woman much better than I do . . . so you're in a position to know how sincere she is. And if she is sincere, why all the stew about what she did yesterday, or last year? She may not have made her mistakes because she wanted to be "bad."

MUST HAVE FAITH

People often make mistakes through the very warmth and richness of their natures . . . and such people can live just as finely and cleanly as anyone else, if they really want to. They may even be stronger in every way than folks who have never been through the fire, because they have gone all awry . . . and then climbed up out of the muck to stand clear-eyed and resolute on new, firm ground. They have fought and won. And if your girl means what she says, the chances are she'll be like that.

But that isn't all, son. A lot depends on you. If you're going to feel you can't trust her . . . if you're going to be eternally suspicious of her . . . if you're going to throw her past in her face every time you get peeved about something . . . then don't marry her. Be generous enough to let her go . . . to let her have her chance to find happiness with someone who can trust her and believe in her . . . because no marriage built on lack of faith can ever be anything but a nightmare.

A Wish for the Day

That I Had More Than One Pair of Hands

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Good morning, Georgie!"

"Good morning, Gloriette!"

"A lovely day after all the rain!"

"Yes MAM. I saw a mocking bird this morning!"

"Was he saying 'Georgie-Georgie-Georgie' as they do in California?"

"No—if he was I didn't know it. It couldn't have sounded nicer, however, to hear a mocking bird's voice saying it than it does to hear YOUR honey voice."

Silence while Gloriette blushes and poses.

"What," says Georgie, "is your wish for the day—besides the one to stay as young and beautiful for ever and ever amen as you are this Saturday?"

"To have," vows Gloriette, "MORE THAN ONE PAIR OF HANDS! There are more things in this world to do with the pair I have than I will ever do. If I had a half dozen—with one I could be making new curtains for the sun parlor. With another I could be digging, DIGGING in my garden. With another pair I could be painting my lamp shade that I decorated with a lino cut. With another I could be cooking—I CAN cook. With another spare I could be playing my piano and indulging in all too few music magiced dreams. And with another I could be washing the luncheon dishes! There. And I could still use a few more pairs than that."

"Life," says Georgie, "is like that! Too few hands, too few years to see and do all the things we know are in the world to see and do. Think of the books that I will never see and read that are sitting, silently beautiful, waiting for me! Think of the pink tinted snowy tops of the world that I will never stand upon because I will die too soon! Think of the pictures I will never see—or paint. The letters I will never write. The words I will never say no matter how fast I talk—the kind ones, I mean. Think of the WORK in my head—already done by fancy—that my hands can't be quick enough to do. Life's like that, Gloriette. But—let's walk a bit' way in this early summer world—and do you think you could manage to let me hold for a little while ONE of those pairs of hands you wish for?"

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Woman Pays and Pays —Her Own Fare

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If a young man invites a young lady to attend a fraternity convention in another city and has arranged for her to stop with his relatives while in the city, what is the proper thing to do regarding her railroad fare? F. C.

The girl would pay her own railroad fare.

More Appropriate for Cool Season Wear

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will it be proper to wear long black kid gloves (18-button length) this summer with chiffons or crepes, if black accessories are worn? G. G.

This plan is more appropriate for cool months, because long black gloves in the summer do indeed look stuffy and hot. I don't believe that you will find many occasions in the summer months for such formality as long gloves suggest. However if you do wish to wear long gloves this summer, I suggest that you wear ones of a light shade, or white, and of a light weight suede, rather than kid.

The Card Constitutes a Call

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. One of my neighbors whom I have never met (I have just moved here) called on me for the first time this afternoon, and not finding me home, left her card in the door. Now what do I do? Return the call, or wait for her to call again?

Shouldn't I, inasmuch as I am very desirous of knowing the particular neighbor who called on me, acknowledge her call without too much delay?

2. Also, do I signify my desire to join the local women's club, or wait until I am invited?

Your column is always so helpful to the "office wife" whose social training was sacrificed to business training!

READER.

1. Yes, as soon as you can return this kind call. The fact that the card was left constitutes a call, the compliment of a call—and therefore your move is next. And the return of such calls is most important when one is trying to establish oneself in a new neighborhood. It isn't easy in any event, but it is made much easier and vastly more charming if you will be punctilious about every gesture that is made to you.

If tea is the convention in that community, make much of serving tea, so this will be quickly and hospitably done when the neighbors come to "pay their respects." The tea table is an important hearth of hospitality.

2. You will probably have to wait until you are invited to join this club. But you soon will be, since you have such a delightfully friendly and appreciative spirit. Good luck to you!

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

If you aren't exactly satisfied with your lot, and are inclined to complain, you might like to hear about someone who is in worse luck. Why that helps I don't know, but usually it does.

In New York, on West Seventy-second street, there is a little hosiery and handkerchief shop run by a woman who for 12 years has been swinging in a cast, with a leg so painfully and incurably hurt that she suffers constantly. She can't go to sleep lying down as you do, but has to sleep in the swinging cast, upright.

She runs this little business and not only makes a success of it, but nourishes the hope that some day her leg will get better. "Then," she says, her eyes brightening, "I will be able to buy a car, and with the right leg usable, I can run it. Won't it be wonderful?"

And shame-faced, you turn away, wondering what you ever did that God has been so very, very good to you.

When the leg cast is changed the woman has to take an anesthetic because of the pain.

The accident happened one day when she was going to work 12 long years ago. She fell through an open window into a court, and was so badly injured that it was thought she would die. But a spirit like hers does not give up easily. She hasn't let the harness and the cast discourage her. She started the little shop, and with very little help she runs it and does it successfully. The work makes her forget her pain. Work has a way of doing that.

It's just a story I thought you might like to hear. I was sure you would get some inspiration from the girl's 12-year struggle, without a complaint against the fate that has inflicted upon her so much suffering.

If you thought you didn't feel so well when you got up this morning, I'll bet you will feel better, and pretty lucky after you read about HER.

I once knew a woman who was in bed for nine years with a broken hip, that wouldn't get well. I couldn't think of her as anything but smiling, because I never saw her when she wasn't. Her sister was a teacher and she had to stay alone most of the day, and the children of the neighborhood used to run in and see Miss Sally. She always showed us a bright smile.

If you know any women who complain when the hair dresser curls their hair the wrong way, who whimper because they can't have three new coats instead of only two, and who sigh incessantly because they can't have the man they love, clip this out and send it to them.

And if you know any more people like this woman, tell me about them.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Hugh Grantland Fails to Send Christmas Greetings

There's no use trying to hide anything from Lillian. She held me off at arm's length after the "thank you," with which I had responded to her wish that the Christmas day would end as happily as it had begun, and sharply scrutinized my face.

"Come out of it!" she apostrophized. "You're what the Scotch call fey. I understand. You think it's too perfect to last. Perhaps it is, but the Lord knows there are enough counterirritants and depressing adjuncts or whatever-you-call-'ems floating around loose to modify the perfection, so you needn't fear any let down."

I nodded. She did not need to name the reasons both of us had for thinking that if causes for sadness and anxiety outside our immediate families would insure a happy Christmas, we might feel safe indeed. Katherine's loneliness, the approaching death of Robert Savarin, the menace to Noel and Mary of Jack Leslie, still eluding Harry Underwood's best efforts to find him, the uncertainty of Philip Veritzen's attitude toward his son and Mary, and the annoyance to me of the personal note which he was sounding, the vague distrust of Helena Brixton's husband, and his brother, which was ours—they followed each other in dolorous procession through my mind, winding up with the most acute anxiety of all, which I realized now, had been in the back of my mind all days.

"Do you realize—?" I said, then stopped abruptly, unwilling to voice my anxiety even to Lillian.

"That we have heard nothing from Hugh all day," she said. "Yes, I know. It's the first time in many years that a Christmas box hasn't come from him. But, as I told you in the city, that doesn't prove that anything terrible has happened to him. He had that sudden summons to China, and he left Wilcox in charge of his affairs, including Jack Leslie. What skullduggery Wilcox practiced immediately afterward we don't know, but it must have been something or the capering cockroach wouldn't have been able to get away and come back to this country."

"But doesn't that show," I argued, as I had done before, "that Wilcox must have been pretty sure Hugh was never coming back? He wouldn't have dared disobey Hugh's orders in regard to Leslie otherwise."

"As I have told you at least sixteen times before," Lillian retorted, "he would if he'd made up his mind to clean up on Hugh and disappear. I threw out some lines over there when Leslie first came back. They had some good bait on them, too, but there hasn't been a nibble so far. It's next to impossible to find out anything about Hugh's affairs that he doesn't choose to give out—you know with what secrecy he hedges himself. But I'll find out in time, and, meanwhile, I'll ask you to remember that the interior of China just now isn't a place from which it's easy to send out messages or Christmas boxes to the dear ones at home."

"It isn't a particularly safe place for strangers, either," I said stubbornly.

"You're eminently correct in that little observation," she retorted, "but 'nowhere's safe for nobody, no time.' D've remember that aviator who'd been through the war, and fell off the bottom step of his porch, bruised his leg and died from blood poison? If you never heard of him, contemplate his case now and develop a philosophy. Hugh's all right. I feel it in my bones. I wish I were as sure of the whereabouts and plans of the 'capering cockroach' Dicky certainly had an inspiration when he called Jack Leslie that. Tell me, do you believe Phil had anything to do with getting Jack Leslie back? It seems almost incredible, but the man's been half mad ever since his plan for Noel's marrying Olina went on the rocks."

I knew that her mention of Leslie was the baldest subterfuge, designed to divert my mind from the gloomy forebodings concerning Hugh Grantland, which had been obsessing me, more or less consciously, all through the Christmas preparations. But, even though I braced myself to apparent calmness, and framed an answer to her question, I could not forget my concern for the most faithful friend, save Lillian, I ever had known. Never since our first dramatic association during the World War, when we had shared perils, and he had saved my life, had he failed to send us a Christmas box with remembrances for Lillian, Marion, Junior and myself. And always, when he changed his address in his roving, adventurous life, he had sent me a postcard with the new address written on it.

I tried hard, however, to let no hint of my anxiety appear in my voice as I answered Lillian's question.

"Just now it seems a Chinese puzzle," I said, "as hard to solve as the riddle of his intentions concerning Mary and Noel. He appears to be mellowing a bit, but who can tell?"

"Nobody, now," Lillian said, raising her arms above her head and flexing them. "Come on, let's stop worrying about everything, and go down to visit Goofs. No. One and Two."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Ivy Poisoning Must Be Treated Promptly.

Nothing is more annoying or distressing than a siege of poisoning from ivy. Ivy poisoning, sometimes spoken of as "Rhus poisoning," or "Rhus dermatatis," is caused by an irritating resinous substance found in the sap of certain plants.

Dr. Copeland

There are from 60 to 70 plants which produce skin irritations. The most common is the plant belonging to the group known as Rhus. Rhus toxicodendron, or poison ivy, is readily distinguished from other similar plants by its leaves. It has three leaflets, the middle stem being longer than the other two.

It is not necessary, in every case, to have direct contact with the plant. Many perplexing cases of ivy poisoning are thus explained. Indirect exposure may be sufficient to bring on an attack.

A susceptible person may be poisoned by merely sitting around a camp-fire in the path of ivy-contaminated smoke. The sap of the plant may be carriedly indirectly by clothing, tools, insects and other objects. In this way it may reach the skin of persons who are quite a distance from the plant.

The sap of the plant causes intense irritation of the skin. Swelling, itching and formation of blisters, at first between the fingers, may be noticed. It spreads and may eventually cover the entire body.

The attack usually lasts about four to six days, but may continue longer. The duration depends upon the degree of exposure and the sensitiveness of the skin.

Some individuals are more susceptible than others. Many persons are entirely immune to the unpleasant effect of ivy.

If you are susceptible to poison ivy and have been exposed to the plant, use an alkaline soap. Wash freely in soapy water. This precaution may prevent poisoning.

If you cannot obtain this soap, gasoline. This application is often successful. But remember, the treatment, whatever it is, must be applied promptly and thoroughly. If delayed the irritation of the skin will spread.

Answers to Health Queries

F. S. Q.—Would worry and strain due to lack of money, etc., tend to affect the health of a man of 30 years of age? He is married and the father of seven children. The patient is subject to "spells" which last for about three or four weeks at a time.

A—Yes. The "spells" may be due to nervousness. Worry and strain will sap the health and strength and cause general complication. He should have a thorough examination so that definite advice and treatment can be outlined.

* * *

Miss D. A. R. Q.—How can hardening of the arteries be diagnosed? The patient is a man of 72 who has attacks resembling acute indigestion—would this be hardening of the arteries? He is active in every way. What would help the pain?

A—See the doctor for examination. Blood pressure would be a factor under the circumstances. The pain might be due to a number of different conditions. Hardening of the arteries is very apt to be present in a man of this age. His doctor will outline the necessary treatment after he has diagnosed the trouble.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When water is hard, a small quantity of borax—a half teaspoonful to a bowlful of warm water—can be used in the shampoo. Borax does no harm if the hair is rinsed thoroughly with a bath spray and a strong force of water. Hard-water soaps can be obtained; they are satisfactory.

Hasty eaters usually eat more food than they require for the health and well-being of their bodies. Gobblers don't get a sufficient supply of gastric juices to make for normal digestion, nor is their food assimilated as it should be. What one eats and how one eats it has much to do with the beauty of the eyes and the complexion.

If there is a single streak of grey hair, it can be darkened by the use of mascara. Mascara is not a permanent dye, it is a temporary darkener, used on the eyebrows and lashes. It comes in solid form. A small brush is dipped in water, passed over the mascara and applied. On white hair it is necessary to use it after each shampoo.

Leading the vanguard of beauty is the friendly, kindly magnetic woman who has a warm, beating heart instead of an ice cube inside her boozum. Her hair may not be up to Hoyle, her figure may be far from svelte, but she makes her beauty record through tolerance of her fellow creatures, and sympathy for them. She is kind to the cook and the cat, the man who brings the laundry, and the beggar at the door. What she lacks in external loveliness she makes up for in spiritual graces. The little dolly-curled, powdered and painted to the gills—will do well to look this lady over. She is a person, a somebody, a champion.

When brushing the hair, lift it up strand by strand and brush from the scalp to the ends. The hair likes that method better than being whacked vigorously here and there, a habit of some of the highly-energized beauty seekers. Brush from the nape of the neck toward the forehead. From either side of a middle parting.

Crooked teeth should have treatment in childhood. Even the first set of teeth should have professional attention. The strength of the teeth, like the solidity of the bones, depends upon proper diet. Babies are fed scientificially these days and the adults of the next generation will have reason to be grateful. They won't have so many beauty ills to worry about. They will have steadier nervous systems.

Household Hints

Coal dust mixed with salt and water will be found useful to bank up fires.

A teaspoonful or so of glycerine added to a small tub of water is useful in softening the lather in which flannel articles are to be washed.

When mayonnaise dressing curdles, bring it back to smoothness by mixing a generous pinch of cornstarch into a teaspoonful of cold water and stirring it into the dressing.

The woman who is fastidious about her attire never forgets her hangers. And sometimes they are rather difficult to pack when going on a journey. Folding hangers can be substituted; they take up much less space and are a great convenience in the sleeping car.

There is nothing better than ammonia and water for removing grease spots from the carpet.

It is nice when entertaining to bake the pies in tiny pans for individual service. They are most attractive and so easy to serve.

If you haven't a food grinder and want to crumb bread, put it into a muslin bag. Unless too dry and hard, it can be squeezed between the fingers and quickly crumbled.

The box used for potatoes, onions, etc., is wisely kept upon a shelf, rather than on the floor under a table. However, should this prove impossible or inconvenient, rollers could be placed on the box, which would eliminate much of the struggle whenever the box is needed.

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Everyone in the social world was at the horse show yesterday, I do believe. The grandstand was filled with smart folks and the fence round the ring, Sewickley Heights, was lined with engrossed spectators. Tonight the Sewickley horse show for 1931 will come to an end.

Sunshiny skies brought forth gay attire as well as many more folks than attended the early classes on the first day.

Costumes In White

Among those I saw yesterday, looking cool and summery, was Mrs. Richard Beatty Mellon, wearing a green and white crepe dress and a green straw hat.

* * *

Louise Reed, whom I saw chatting with friends near the ring, chose an all white costume, and Dorothy Slack was in white crepe with a navy blue hat.

Arriving with their mother, Mrs. Robert H. McCague, in white crepe, a green jacket and a white crepe hat, were little Alice and Barbara McCague.

Mrs. James Verner Scaife was a notable spectator. Others in the grandstand were Mrs. John W. Ritchie in white crepe and a brown hat, Mrs. Frank W. Edmondson in white jersey and a white wool coat and white straw hat; James Francis Burke, sitting in his box with his daughter, Mrs. Francis Burke Rodgers, and Mrs. George H. Love, in yellow boucle with a yellow felt turban.

Elizabeth Hutton was there with her hostess, Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland, and Mrs. George L. Craig, Jr., who chose a cream knitted suit and a yellow straw hat. Mrs. Harvey Childs III was in yellow crepe with a yellow hat. Mrs. William Penn Snyder, Jr., looked charming in a blue and pink boucle costume and a pink turban. Nearby was Mrs. W. Terrel Johnson in pale blue crepe with a hat to match.

Late in the afternoon I had a glimpse of Maj. and Mrs. Reginald Macdonald, with Mrs. Macdonald wearing a costume of white crepe with a white straw hat. Attractive Mrs. Charles Arrott wore a pink crepe frock, embroidered in white, and a white hat.

Younger Set There

A number of the younger set attended the show. Among them were Marie Louise Bickford in a smart white pique frock and hat with coin dots in blue for color contrast; Elizabeth Craig, Nancy Lippincott, Jane Noaker, Elizabeth Campbell, and Marguerite Borntraeger. Marguerite chose a blue boucle suit and a white knitted turban. With her was Katherine Frazer in blue and white crepe with a blue and white turban.

Lucille Todd, another member of the debutante set, chose pale blue crepe with red and yellow at the neckline, and a blue angora turban. Lois Tack, Jane Marshall and Betty McKay I saw chatting with Thomas Pickering in a car parked by the ringside.

Always a faithful spectator at horse shows is Mrs. Herbert A. May, who chose a green crepe frock and a brown straw hat.

Among the children at the show were Isabel Jones, Billy Arrott and Cyrus Heard, who were chaperoned by Mrs. Charles Arrott.

Suits In Vogue

I saw Mrs. Alexander Laughlin Robinson looking smart in a blue wool suit and a blue crepe hat and Priscilla Hall in a white wool suit having a green scarf. Her hat was of white panama.

Of course Mrs. T. J. Hilliard was there, striking in a brown and tan crepe dress with a brown shantung jacket and coarse brown straw hat.

In the grandstand I saw Mrs. Maitland Alexander in blue boucle and an eggshell straw hat chatting with her sister, Mrs. William Christopher Robinson, who looked cool in a white wool suit and blue felt hat. Mary Franklin Robinson chose a yellow crepe dress and a white turban.

Mrs. Drayton Heard was in green boucle with a green straw hat, and Mrs. A. Marshall Bell in blue and white printed crepe with lace at the neckline and a blue straw hat.

A green costume with a green turban was the choice of Mrs. R. Kent Hanson, and pink crepe with a blue jacket of Madelaine Alexander.

Dormont Century Club Members Enthusiastically Discuss New Home at Luncheon

The new club house seemed to be the chief topic of interest at the annual luncheon of the Dormont New Century Club which was held yesterday at the St. Clair Country Club. Everybody apparently caught the enthusiastic spirit of the building chairman, Mrs. John H. Bricker, as she told of the many gifts which have already been made to the new club home or as she spoke of the cornerstone laying and the scroll of names that is to be sealed in the stone. Another evidence of the building spirit came when Mrs. J. W. Young, retiring president, was presented with five gold pieces and announced that she would use them to buy a permanent gift for the clubhouse. And Mrs. Ronald L. Thompson, junior president, proffered the presiding officer's table as the juniors' contribution.

One hundred and thirty-five members and guests were present at the luncheon which was arranged by Mrs. W. M. Hall, Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, president of the Congress of Clubs and a past president of Dormont New Century, offered the invocation and was given an ovation when she was later introduced by Mrs. Joseph N. Orbin, program chairman. Mrs. Young's successor, Mrs. H. H. Heinrich, was introduced. Mrs. E. E. Houghtelin, scholarship chairman, presented the club's award to Miss Leanna Stright and announced that an additional award of $100 had been made to last year's winner, Miss June Watson.

A short program of entertainment was given by Helen Louise Marquis, Margaret Stoerkel Wilhelm and Mrs. Petrie Abbott. Miss Marquis did two groups of songs effectively with Mrs. Wilhelm playing lovely accompaniments. Mrs. Young was at the piano for the three enjoyable musical readings presented by Mrs. Abbott.

Added Feature

A program from 4 until 5 o'clock will be an added feature of the garden bridge party which the Tuesday Musical Club Choral will sponsor at "Stone Gables," Mrs. F. F. Rohrer's home in Churchill road on Thursday.

Its annual luncheon will be held Tuesday at the Edgwood Country Club by the Edgewood Cot Club. Mrs. Alexander M. Cadman heads the day's hostesses.

FASHION TURNS APPROVING EYE ON EYELET GARMENTS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, June 6.—If our eyes do get a trifle weary of looking at frocks and things with eyelet embroidery, it won't be our fault. For broderie anglaise peeps forth from everything. All kinds of day clothes, from simple sport frocks to elaborate afternoon ensembles, as well as many evening models, use this trimming as their sole ornamentation. Very lovely are evening frocks with the eyelets outlined in silver thread or diamante, while daytime clothes use eyelet embroidery outlined with different colors than the dress to provide a clever means of achieving the season's necessary color contrast. It is a nice form of embellishment and a most summery one, and it will no doubt be seen throughout the season on originals and copies. On the latter, of course, it will often be of the machine variety.

* * *

IN THE ACCOMPANYING drawing are two views of a most attractive ensemble by the house of Bruyere, famous for its coats and other outdoor clothes. The dress is of creamy white crepe marocain, while the coat is of matching wool crepe. As this is a most up-to-date ensemble, we find eyelets embroidery trimming the sleeves and closing edges of both frock and coat. The skirt of the belted coat is cut frankly circular, whereas the skirt of the frock has its greatest fulness clustered at one side in deep, unpressed folds. The one-sided closing of the neckline of the frock, with its pert little bow, is a detail worthy of notice. This is one of the cleverest and most original ensembles noted in any of the new collections and one that appealed to almost every woman who saw it at the initial showing.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

STEEL, MOTOR DECREASES SEASONAL

Present Downward Trend In Industries Contrary To Early Expectations

By B. E. V. LUTY

Automobile production in May, as just reported by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, reflects usual or average seasonal swing and supplies another instance of an activity following its ordinary course instead of showing progressive increase or decrease. The point is important because at the beginning of the year it was commonly thought that on account of everyone being so conservative there would be slower seasonal increase than usual in various things, with later peaks and perhaps no peaks at all, but instead a continuous increase, due to general underlying conditions gradually growing better.

Both steel and automobile have pursued courses quite out of keeping with that conception. In both direction and time swings have been simply in accordance with precedent.

MAY ACTIVITY OFF

From April to May automobile production decreased 4.1 per cent, the May report just issued showing 338,307 cars and trucks, United States and Canada. Before May opened, predictions had been practically universal that it would run above April and earlier in the year there had been a notion that even June might prove to be the peak month.

A five-year average, 1924 to 1928 inclusive, shows May automobile production 3 per cent under April, while this year the decrease appears to have been 4 per cent. In one of the last eight years, March was the peak month, in four years April took the position and in three years May was peak. Two years, with exceptional conditions, had later and higher peaks, in August and October respectively.

STEEL TREND MARKED

Steel ingot production rose to a peak in the third week in March and then began a continuous decline. Both the rise and fall conformed to precedent as to direction and time, but both greatly exceeded the usual amount. The descending slope approximated the ascending slope, which is quite by the book, striking an average of a number of ordinary or more or less typical years.

The seasonal swing in steel is more marked than usual, instead of being less marked or absent entirely, as was expected. Whether automobile production will now show an unusually large seasonal decrease remains to be seen.

LIVES SAVED BY RAIL

Officials of the Hunter Steel Company declare that two recent accidents on the Ohio River boulevard illustrate the effectiveness of efforts being made by the County Commissioners and the Department of Public Works to protect the lives of automobilists.

A car traveling at a high rate of speed jumped the curb and struck the new safety fence being installed along the boulevard by the Hunter Steel Company. The impact was so terrific that half of the heads of some of the rivets were actually sheared off, and the heavy intermediate member bent about nine inches out of line, and actually stretched but nevertheless held together.

Another accident of exactly the same nature occurred on the same boulevard, May 29, and that the lives of the six occupants were saved was unquestionably due to the character and strength of the railing used by Allegheny County of this work, in their opinion.

A county engineer stated that had any other railing in use in Allegheny County, other than a Hunter Safety Railing, been in use at this place, the car in the accident near Verner road, would have plunged through and landed on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks 200 feet below, and the six occupants in the car that ran into the railing at Forrest avenue would have landed on a paved street 25 feet below.

Baltimore & Ohio Takes Merger Step

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

AT LAST ONE OF THE RAILROADS has taken a definite step toward completing a merger in accordance with the Interstate Commerce Commission consolidation plan. The Baltimore and Ohio has asked for permission to operate the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh and the Buffalo and Susquehanna. The two roads are controlled by the Baltimore and Ohio so that no change in ownership will take place. The proposal will make possible a demonstration of the effectiveness of consolidations in saving money for the carriers.

The move represents one of the first attempts of a major eastern trunk line to consolidate operations of a controlled line which has been assigned to it by the commission.

For the past 10 years the eastern trunk lines have been jockeying for strategical positions in the railroad merger game. Many purchases of securities and trades have been made but no actual consolidations of consequence have taken place.

Plan Presented Year Ago

UNTIL A YEAR AGO the railroads were powerless to complete any actual mergers. The transportation act provides that the Interstate Commerce Commission could not approve any individual mergers until it had drawn up a general consolidation program for the entire country.

The commission first insisted that the task was too difficult for it to complete because of the many problems involved. It finally carried out the provisions of the law with a proposal for the formation of 21 systems in the entire country, five of which were to be in eastern trunk line territory.

For the first time this opened the way for the actual completion of consolidations as long as they fitted into the plan. It happened, however, that the railroad leaders in buying control of various systems had developed alliances which did not fit the commission's scheme in many respects. The four leading rail powers in the East also disagreed among themselves on many points.

Four-Line Plan Submitted

UNDER PRESSURE FROM the administration the eastern trunk lines finally agreed on most of the major points and submitted their own plan to the commission. This provided for four trunk line systems in the East. Up to the present time the commission has not taken any action on the proposal of the railroads so it is not know whether the original plan will be modified or not.

The merger of the Baltimore and Ohio with the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh and the Buffalo and Susquehanna is not likely to encounter any serious snags since it fits into both sets of plans. The problem of financing is also eliminated since the Baltimore and Ohio holds about 99 per cent of the stock of the lines.

Still Holds Western Maryland

WHILE THE BALTIMORE and Ohio has taken one step toward carrying out the commission's merger plan, it appears to be in no hurry to comply with another order requiring it to get rid of its controlling interest in the Western Maryland. The line has asked for another six months extension of time.

Under the commission's merger plan the Western Maryland was to be an important link in the Wabash-Seaboard or fifth trunk line system. With the Pittsburgh and West Virginia and the Wheeling and Lake Erie it would become a part of a new trunk line to extend from the Middle West through Pittsburgh to the Atlantic seaboard. The four leading eastern trunk lines are not particularly eager to have such a system come into existence. Their own merger plan would make other distributions of these lines.

SURPLUS RAIL CARS GAIN

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Class I railroads on May 23 had 623,658 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the American Railway Association announced today. This was an increase of 14,987 cars compared with May 15, at which time there were 608,671 surplus freight cars.

Surplus coal cars on May 23 totaled 253,590, an increase of 7,318 cars within a week, while surplus box cars totaled 299,437, an increase of 6,558 for the same period. Reports also showed 30,528 surplus stock cars, an increase of 525 cars above the number reported on May 15, while surplus refrigerator cars totaled 16,242, an increase of 161 for the same period.

PACKERS' RATE FIGHT PUSHED

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, by board action, yesterday moved to file a petition before the Interstate Commerce Commission in behalf of Pittsburgh packers in their fight for removal of inequalities in freight rates on fresh meat and packing house products from points in Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and other midwestern states to Pittsburgh. The chamber's statement read, in part:

"The Pittsburgh packing industry employs about 2,400 persons and has a total payroll of $3,500,000 per year, which could be increased 50 per cent or more, providing employment for greater numbers, if these inequalities in rates were removed."

RAILS REPORT DECLINE IN PROFITS

Spread of Coal Strike Will Further Lower Rate of Production

Retail trade has been somewhat less active this week than last and jobbers of drygoods, men's and women's wearing apparel and shoes all report trade quieter, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

While the demand for lumber and building materials is slightly better than is was, the volume of business in these lines continue decidedly below normal. There is a moderate demand for hardware and farm implements but not much activity in builders hardware. Groceries and provisions continue to move in a fair volume but the margin of profit is reported very small.

Production of crude oil is at a slightly higher rate and prices to producers have been rather sharply lowered in some sections. A strike in the bituminous coal field appears to be spreading and will doubtless result in a further lowering of the rate of production which is estimated at about 20 per cent under a year ago. Demand continues slow and prices show practically no change.

No particular improvement is noted in collections, jobbers reporting the average as still slow.

WINDOW GLASS SALES GAIN

Improvement in both shipments and sales of window glass featured an otherwise quiet and rather listless week in the flat glass industry, according to American Glass Review. Distribution of plate glass was holding along substantially the same lines as last week and the same may be said of the rough rolled and wire glass market.

The increase in demand for window glass, even though not pronounced, lends some encouragement to the situation and is in line with the gradually upward trend shown practically throughout last month. Reflected in this greater activity is the increase in residential building operations as well as some replenishment of jobbers' stocks.

California Utility To Redeem Bonds

FIRST QUARTER RAIL INCOME DECLINES

Reports of 170 Systems Show Return of 2.11% On Property Investment

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Class I railroads of the United States for the first four months of 1931 had a net railway operating income of $146,136,775, which was at the annual rate of return of 2.11 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics and made public today. In the first four months of 1930, their net railway operating income was $238,805,095 or 3.51 per cent on their property investment.

Property investment is the value of road and equipment as shown by the books of the railroads, including materials, supplies and cash. The net railway operating income is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and equipment rentals but before interest and other fixed charges are paid.

This compilation as to earnings for the first four months of 1931 is based on reports from 170 class I railroads representing a total of 242,720 miles.

Gross operating revenues for the first four months of 1931 totaled $1,448,260,061 compared with $1,783,685,089 for the same period in 1930, or a decrease of 18.8 per cent. Operating expenses for the first four months of 1931 amounted to $1,148,323,419, compared with $1,387,040,660 for the same period one year ago or a decrease of 17.2 per cent.

Class I railroads in the first four months of 1931 paid $110,163,867 in taxes, compared with $118,144,072 for the same period in 1930, a decrease of 6.8 per cent. For the month of April alone, the tax bill of the Class I railroads amounted to $28,154,213, a decrease of $1,843,021 under April the previous year.

Forty-five class I railroads operated at a loss in the first four months of 1931 of which 13 were in the eastern, six in the southern and 26 in the western district.

The Glassport-Elizabeth Road, located in Glassport Borough and Lincoln Township, is a reconstruction of a deteriorated stretch of roadway bordering the Monongahela River and extending to the Glassport approach to the Glassport-Clairton Bridge, for a distance of 1.42 miles. This road, as all roads paralleling the rivers, is a heavily traveled road, due to its generally low grades.
The pavement on the new road consists of reinforced concrete, 9 inches thick at the edges, 7 inches at center, and is 20 feet wide.
This contract was awarded to F. W. Scott on September 23, 1930, the contract price being $124,459.00. The work will be completed about the first of July, and the source of funds for this improvement was the 1928 Peoples Bond Issue.

Employment Up in Building Industry

HARRISBURG, June 6. — Reports received by the Department of Labor and Industry from 58 firms in the construction and contracting industry show a 26.9 per cent increase in employment for April as compared with March. Wage payments increased 16.7 per cent. The 26.9 per cent increase in employment for April is much greater than the advance for this period in 1930. In April, 1930, reports from 63 construction firms showed a 16 per cent gain in employment and a 32.1 per cent increase in wage payments as compared with March.

The construction employment index for April, 1931, as represented by the reports from 58 firms, was 35.3 per cent less than in April, 1930, and the index of wage payments showed a 47.2 per cent decline.

Exports of Sugar From Cuba High

HAVANA, June 6.—Cuban sugar exports from January 1 to May 15, under permits granted by the National Sugar Export Corporation amounted to 372,866 tons (1929-30 crop) and 272,359 tons (1930-31 crop) to the United States, and 125,961 and 62,085 tons, respectively, to other countries. Sugar exported during the period by the corporation itself to countries outside the United States totaled 21,078 tons, all from the 1930-31 crop, making a grand total of 854,349 tons.

More U. S. Wheat Bought by France

PARIS, June 6.—France is buying more wheat from the United States than at any time within the last year, native stocks having dwindled to such an extent the country must buy in foreign markets.

The amount of foreign wheat legally admitted to France recently was raised to 25 per cent of the amount used from 10 per cent. However, authoritative circles said that millers actually are buying from 50 to 60 per cent of their wheat abroad.

Would Bar 'Outside' Interest in Lines

BOSTON, June 6.—As a means of defeating future foreign control of the New England railroads, the Massachusetts Legislative Committee on transportation has recommended the unification of all New England lines except the Boston and Albany and Central Vermont into one system.

The report climaxed an exhaustive investigation made at the direction of Gov. J. B. Ely into the extent of the penetration of outside interest into the New England railroad field.

Improvement Noted In Electric Orders

NEW YORK, June 6.—Although electrical equipment buyers in most sections of the country continue to take only necessities and are placing commitments on a strictly hand-to-mouth basis, word from eastern and Pacific Coast centers indicates a gradual week-to-week improvement in those territories, both in actual purchases and inquiries, Electrical World reports. Electric railway account is a primary factor in current activity in the East.

League to Oppose Freight Rate Boost

WASHINGTON, June 6.—National League of commission merchants, representing organized distributors of fresh fruits and vegetables, announce their intention of opposing a horizontal increase in railroad freight rates. Warning is issued that such a program will meet strenuous opposition and that producers, growers and farmers generally are expected to join the offensive against freight rate increases.

LOWER WHEAT AIDS LOOSE-WILES

Supplies of Higher Cost Grain Used Up; Price of Finished Product Stable

CHICAGO, June 6.—April net profit of Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company was somewhat better than for the like month a year ago.

Lower prices for wheat, of which the company uses an estimated 5,000,000 bushels a year, as against the relatively stable prices of its products, place Loose-Wiles in good position to maintain earnings at or near 1930 levels during the balance of the year, according to a director, who pointed out also that the company has now consumed practically all its inventories of wheat bought at higher prices than now prevail.

FIRST QUARTER OFF

In the first quarter of this year earnings were slightly behind those in the corresponding quarter a year ago so that the improvement in April indicates the possibility of a change in trend. Net profit in the three months ended March 31, 1931, was $515,833, equal to 82 cents a share on 548,303 shares of common, against $560,050 or 98 cents a share on 500,000 shares earned in the 1930 quarter.

In 1930 Loose-Wiles covered its present $3 dividend rate on the common stock by a margin of $1 a share. The $3 rate includes the regular extras which have been declared quarterly for some years.

PLANT EXPANSION

Earnings last year were $2,465,597, equal to $4 a share on 548,303 shares against $2,732,095 or $4.58 a share on 500,000 shares earned in 1929.

Loose-Wiles made a number of important additions to its facilities last year by the purchase of the Tru-Blu Biscuit Company, operating a chain of plants on the Pacific coast and of the Shust Company. A flour mill previously operated under lease was bought and a new bakery costing $680,000 was constructed at Grafton, O. In April of this year the Standard Biscuit Company of San Francisco was acquired.

BUSINESS INDEX TURNS DOWN

NEW YORK, June 6.—Swings of stock market sentiment are capricious, but they have become crucially important for business recovery because they now control the congealed currents of credit. The beginning of a major bull movement would be the rarest thing in June during a depression year, unless the business improvement since December has been mysteriously underestimated. The current trade statistics are of no special significance save as showing sustained resistance to further radical recession and an early onset of the usual summer slackness, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today.

The business index has shaded off slightly during May, and is back to the level of the beginning of the year. For the week ended May 30 it settled at 77.9 per cent, against 77.7 in the preceding week and 93 per cent in the corresponding week last year.

Company Revises Income Estimates

NEW YORK, June 6.—Granite City Steel Company has enjoyed a pickup in business over the past month and instead of showing earnings smaller than the first quarter showing of 30 cents a share on 292,347 capital shares as earlier expected by the management, the current quarter will show an increase. It is likely that first-half earnings will be between 70 cents and 80 cents a share.

Spectator

Reversal Is Puzzle. Will It End Bear Market? Past Events Pointed Out.

—By Wall Street Spectator—

NEW YORK, June 6.

ONE OF THE difficult questions confronting Wall street at the moment is whether the recent reversal in trend marked the culmination of the long bear market, or if it is merely to be regarded as one of those technical upturns which interrupt every protracted downward movement.

Extensive study of the history of bull and bear markets has brought out the fact that the so-called market leaders are almost always the last ones to complete their movements in either direction.

That is to say, that just as the tail end of a bull market is usually characterized by wide advances in the acknowledged blue chip stocks, in which the secondary issues do not participate, so the endings of bear movements are most frequently marked by sharp and continued declines in high-priced stocks in which the secondary issues participate to only a minor degree.

TO DETERMINE just how the present market stands in relation to this data, a financial statistical service has selected a group of so-called market leaders, and compared their performance with a group of secondary issues. Price movements of these two groups are compared from the first week in May, 1929, to the first week in September, 1929, and again from the third week in December, 1930, to June 1, 1931.

This study discloses that in the final stages of the 1929 bull market, the group of market leaders advanced on the average 36.3 per cent in about four months. During that identical period, the secondary issues declined approximately 3.87 per cent.

IN THE PERIOD September, 1929, to December, 1930, the leading stocks declined more than 50 per cent on the average, while for the same period the secondary issues declined 80.6 per cent on the average, thus indicating that the secondary issues were liquidated more rapidly than the leaders.

Since the middle of December, 1930, the same leading stocks have declined approximately 25 per cent, while the secondary issues have declined less than 6½ per cent.

In other words, just as the secondary issues failed to follow the blue chip stocks in the final phase of the 1929 bull market they are now practically ignoring the final liquidation of the blue chip issues.

Says Many Trade Rules Unnecessary

CHICAGO, June 6.—James C. Murray, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, issued a statement yesterday asserting that the Canadian Royal Commission investigating grain futures trading had definitely confirmed the high economic value of the marketing system which originated in the United States and had been practiced for many years. Murray's statement said much had been lost by business in the United States through unnecessary restrictions and regulations as compared with other countries, and that it was now high time the United States government should turn attention to regaining the lost ground.

Telephone Income Shows Increase

Operating income of 105 telephone companies in March totaled $24,106,055 against $22,805,572 in March, 1930, and for three months amounted to $69,202,739 against $67,791,035 in the like 1930 period.

RAILROADS HELD DEPRESSION VICTIMS

Carrier Presidents Blame General Business Slump Rather Than Competition

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, June 6.—Characteristic of bear markets is the human tendency to exaggerate unfavorable factors, just as in bull markets the public overvalues favorable prospects.

This trait is well illustrated by the current popular attitude toward railroad securities and railroad problems. It is doubtless true that the bargain hunting instincts, which have been sharpened by depression, have quickened the flow of traffic to competitive agencies, such as buses and motor trucks, but the factor of outside competition is no new element which has come into the situation since the panic.

Mr. Rukeyser

COMPETITION VS. SLUMP

Queried as to the degree of which the current adversity of the carriers is ascribable to business depression rather than to the new competition, the head of one of the great eastern trunklines told me:

"You ask whether the railroads are victims of the business depression or whether something more lasting and fundamental is wrong with the carriers. Of course, the railroads are victims of the present business depression. When the volume of business generally shows a reduction of 30 per cent or more, that means that the business of the railroads is reduced by the same percentage. In addition to that, however, within recent years new transportation agencies have been developed which compete with the railroads. To just what extent the business of the railroads has been reduced by these new competing agencies, no one can definitely say, but I am quite certain that were it not for the business depression, the railroads would be showing very satisfactory results regardless of the new competition."

BLAMES DEPRESSION

Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad points out:

"The effect of the business depression upon the railroads has been much the same as upon industry and commerce in general, and when conditions improve in this country and abroad, we shall find our railroad traffic and earnings picking up pretty much as we shall find the production of our steel mills, our coal mines and our automobile plants.

"While I feel that we have an abundance of transportation facilities, I also believe that ultimately we will need and profitably use them all. Our real requirements are to introduce order into the present situation, check wasteful competition and duplication of service, and obviate the too rapid creation of additional facilities for furnishing commercial transportation in advance of the country's needs."

Business Failures Increase Sharply

NEW YORK, June 6.—Business defaults, as reported to Bradstreet's, increased sharply this week, being 7.3 per cent more in number than in the preceding week, 21.2 per cent more than a year ago, and 41.7 per cent more than in the like week of 1929.

Considered by business groups, retailers, as usual, contributed the largest number, aggregating 68.7 per cent of the total. The smallest number was again found in the banking group. Small businesses having a capital of less than $5,000 furnished 80.3 per cent of the total number failing.

Stock Exchange Topics

Steel Has Made Good Following Slumps In Past

Observers point out that U. S. Steel has made a good record in the past after a depression period. In 1921 and 1922, when only $2.24 and $2.12 a common share, respectively, were reported, the $5 annual dividend rate was maintained. Then in 1923, when the depression had ended definitely, earnings mounted to $16.42 a share. It is argued that the Steel Corporation will again make an impressive recovery in revenues when conditions change for the better. Economies and efficiency which will result from the latest depression will be reflected in the results of future years.

Short covering by outsiders has been quite extensive at times in the current week. It has been noted that when the market has displayed a tendency to move ahead the outsiders who had been playing the short side day by day rushed to take in their commitments. This covering was quite a factor in getting sharp advances in various stocks.

Judging by some stories now going the rounds in speculative circles, it begins to appear that the little bear, or the board room short, has been given something akin to a whip-sawing. A fortnight or so back it was being intimated that the followers of the bear side would one day wake up to find themselves without the leadership which had been afforded them by the doings of some of the larger bear operators. And, according to reports now current, it appears their position has been a little the worse if anything. For street gossip now places some of the recent bear leaders at the head of the list of those who are credited with piloting the market upward at the expense of the short position.

Week-end realizing developing in the early afternoon yesterday called something of a halt on the recovery movement in progress since the opening on Wednesday. Furthermore, the action of the market through that period suggested demand from shorts for covering purposes had lost considerable of its zest. The rank and file of leading stocks tapered off quite sharply from the high levels reached around the end of the third hour with Steel, American Can, General Motors, Case Threshing Machine, Du Pont and most of the rails sliding back 1 to 5 points or so.

Thus far, according to reply to the query in a number of larger commission houses, there has been little in the way of outside buying since the market turned. In fact one of the bigger wire houses reported it had been actually a seller on balance Thursday and that through the first half of yesterday's session its position was about even. The average broker just now finds himself forced to listen to the lamentations of traders who missed the turn after waiting patiently for its arrival and perhaps having experienced the displeasure of having been "hooked" in the parlance of the street on the several false starts made by the market in the last few weeks.

Corporate stock and bond financing in May totaled $422,500,000, compared with $376,900,000 in April, Standard Statistics Company reports. The total for the first five months this year is $1,966,400,000, compared with $4,046,500,000 for the corresponding period last year and $5,755,800,000 for 1929. Bonds continue to account for more than 90 per cent of the total, whereas in 1929 they were less than one-third of the total

Can't Verify Everything

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

In awarding the Hokumola prize for the most-repeated news story we hand it to that one about the Dolly sisters winning 10,000,000 francs at Monte Carlo.

That's popped up 11 times this year. It has been printed over 300 times in the last 10 years. We have been at Monte Carlo when the Dolly sisters were gambling, and we know they wouldn't bet a thin dime against a thick dollar.

Next is the one about the Russian couple murdering their own boy. The old folks keep an inn. The boy gets rich in America. Comes home. Doesn't reveal his identity. Flashes roll. Goes to bed. Old folks part his hair with an ax.

In the morning they discover they have killed their wandering boy. Sobs. Curtain. And don't beat your neighbor to the exit.

Story bobs up every six months. Sometimes the old couple happen to be Rumanian, Scotch, Greek, Bulgarians. Only thing changed is the date and the country. Watch for this yarn. Accept no substitutes.

Another good old composing room standby is the Spanish prisoner. Also the snake that milked the cow.

We thought that one about the cat swimming the Missouri River was a fake. Until we actually saw it in the newsreels.

Even then we weren't convinced. The cat might have been using a double.

The last time the old couple smacked their boy in the face with a hardware store they were Turkish. Next month they will be Chinese. Bunk or not, they are seeing the world.

So don't waste your interurban tears over that one. It's what we call a filler. Just pushed into complete the page.

We don't know who figures out these yarns. We don't know who actually puts them in the paper. Two winters ago we read about a Boston man choking an ostrich to death. He was intoxicated. Bird sober. Man has thick overcoat on and climbs over zoo fence to sleep. Overcoat saves him from ostrich kicks and he ties its neck into a lover's knot.

That was true. But it will bob up again in different form. Boston man will be six athletic Portuguese, and the ostrich will be a leopard stranded at low tide.

VARIED RADIO BILL :-: Three Polar Bears' Expand Service :-: BOSTON SYMPHONY SERIES

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

We believe you can find what you want in tonight's radio fare. Every type of music is represented from Ted Lewis and Rudy Vallee to the Boston Symphony and as extra specials we have Grace Hayes for musical-comedy fans, a talk by Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and the Red Arrow Quartet. The "Three Polar Bears" at KDKA inaugurate a new service at 11:15, broadcasting messages and music to the Bartlett-Norcross pedition in the Greenland Ocean. These "bears" are perfectly harmless. They are Louis E. Kaufman, Walter G. Myers and William A. Farren who miss a few hours of their Saturday night sleep every week to cheer people in far-away places.

Real Estate

A building lot in the exclusive Lynnehaven road, Fourteenth Ward, has been sold by Carl J. Jacobsen to Robert B. Heppenstall for a private consideration. Arthur B. Kline & Co., represented by Kenneth N. Downs, were the brokers.

W. B. Dawson & Co. have sold for the Schwerd estate to Dr. E. W. Buetzow a lot in McClure avenue, near Davis avenue, North Side. The purchaser, according to Dawson, will erect a house on the property.

A brick house on lot 20x130 feet at 4055 Cabinet street has been conveyed by Joseph Zabka to Bernard Postreich for $9,100. It is reported by the Gribbin Company, Lawrenceville brokers.

The weekly mortgage report of C. C. C. Stotler, secretary-treasurer of the Title Guaranty Company, shows that a total of 318 mortgages, valued at $1,445,913.03, were placed on record from May 28 to, and including, June 3.

Two hundred and ninety-eight of the total with a valuation of $1,356,099.03 were straight mortgages. The remaining 20, valued at $89,814, were purchase money mortgages.

Of the straight mortgages, 104 amounting to $705,284.28, were to corporations, 106 with a valuation of $338,000 to building and loan associations and 88, valued at $312,814.75 to individuals.

Applications for building permits follow:

First Ward—D. Sokolski, alterations, 1619 Forbes street, $6,000.

Eighteenth Ward—J. T. Hacket, brick dwelling and garage, 419 Kathleen street, $5,000.

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, June 6.—Though the minstrel show is just a piece of theatrical antiquity to the big towns there seems to be a sufficient number of people who cherish the old days to provide an enthusiastic welcome for this type of entertainment on the air.

Only the meat of the old time minstrel show is of course retained for the microphones—the jokes and songs and sketches. Gone—at least until television—is the street parade of the fond memory, gone is any attempt at grotesque make-up and characterization.

The modern minstrel show of the radio, while eliminating many of the colorful features of its predecessor, still employs the old technique. The interlocutor still asks, "Who was the lady I seen you with last night?" and out of the past the shades of all the Sambos answer, "That wasn't no lady, that was my wife." And the armchairs rock in a million homes, and from them echo the cry "Dockstader's in his heaven, all's right with the world."

* * *

Since broadcasting took off its swaddling clothes minstrel shows have been among the most popular entertainments on the air. The networks featured them for several seasons with all their old tunes, all their stale jokes, gathering moss these many years. There always seems to be one available—to keep the old color of American amusements alive.

* * *

Yet, it is probable that the old type minstrel show is better to hear in the parlor than to see in the theater. It is so definitely outmoded in the theater as to make its appeal, if there is any, that of a curiosity. In the home it evokes pleasant memories in the manner, say, of a family album. In the theater in the big town theater—it inspires a deep and irresistible yawn.

* * *

Even its revival by big stage names fails to win a response. I recall particularly an effort by Broadway producers to put on a big minstrel show some years back with such names in the cast as De Wolf Hopper and Jefferson De Angelis and various temporarily idle actors from the Lambs Club. It was a complete flop. People stayed away in droves.

It may be that radio will restore something of the old prestige of the minstrel show, especially the type of show as presented by Dockstader and Primrose. Were Dockstader alive today undoubtedly he would be among the most valuable members of the radio army. With his "Everybody Works but Father," he immortalized pappy on the stage as no one ever did. Strangely, the song is never heard today—on or off the air.

* * *

No Americans are busier than those who are writing songs for radio, unless it be those who are crooning songs for radio. Crooning has become an old broadcasting custom. So, for that matter, has wielding a stick over a symphony band. Symphony bands are almost as numerous today on the radio as those which hymn the hotsy totsy airs of Tin Pan Alley. Never heard of a Negro band.

But what they can't do to the "spirichels" and folk songs and the blues of Harlem! They are so superior to the white folks' interpretation of these types of music as to make comparison not only futile, but silly. Wonder why the broadcasters in transmitting American music to foreign shores never include a colored band or chorus airing "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," or "Jubilo" or even W. C. Handy's "St. Louis Blues?"

For Food... we rely chiefly on A&P

says SIR HUBERT WILKINS

"For food and other human supplies, we rely chiefly on The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company. Our requirements have been scientifically studied by their expert dietitians," says Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins, in his recent book, "Under the North Pole," which describes the Wilkins-Ellsworth Arctic Expedition.

Under the barren wastes of the North, far from the food sources of civilization, exploring the depths of the Arctic seas in a submarine, exposed to the rigors of polar climate—the food taken on this expedition is of supreme importance. Food may spell success or failure.

That is why Sir Hubert chose A & P to supply all of the daily food on which he and his men will depend during the trying months of their venture. A & P scientists analyzed the needs of these explorers. A & P buyers selected the food. Every pound of butter, of vegetables, of meat, of coffee—every item of food in the regular diet of the Nautilus crew is furnished by A & P.

A & P is proud to render this service for so gallant an exploit. A & P is fitted to do so because of its experience in supplying the equally important food requirements of millions of customers every day.

NON-DRAFT RULE COSTLY TO ARLETT

PITTSBURGH FANS TODAY were to get their first look at the most talked about recruit of the National League season in the person of Russell (Buzz) Arlett, the new rightfielder of the Phillies, who has been knocking down the fences in the Heydler circuit at a rate to make the owners of 15 other big league clubs kick themselves for having overlooked him. And they overlooked him plenty. They let him linger out in the Pacific Coast League 13 years. Brooklyn had decided to buy him from Oakland last fall, but passed him up at the last minute and took Ike Boone instead. Recently Boone was shipped to Newark.

Buzz Arlett

So it remained for the Phils to pick up Arlett for the bargain price of $15,000 and so far he has looked like the cheapest prize package drawn by any major league club since the Pirates got Lloyd Waner for nothing. Buzz may not be the greatest outfielder, but that he can sock the old apple is attested by his position among the leading swat specialists. He has made 10 home runs and is hitting .373.

ARLETT'S CASE SHOWS how the non-draft regulations of recent years worked out to the disadvantage of the players. Though any major league club could have taken a chance on him at the draft price, none was willing to run the risk of buying him at fancy figures. The result was that Buzz had to stay in the sticks until he was 33, thus being knocked out of many years of service in the big show, where he could have drawn a much larger salary.

The Quaker slugger stands 6 feet 3 inches, weighs 225 pounds and is a turnover hitter. His first five years in the Coast League were served as a pitcher, after which an injury to his hurling arm forced his transfer to the outfield. In his eight years as a regular outfielder he hit 237 home runs. Last season he batted .361 in 176 games, his hits including 31 homers, seven triples and 57 doubles.

ARLETT MAY BE one of the few players to hit better in the majors than in the minors. At least, if he succeeds in leading the National League in batting, as his teammates believe he has a chance to do, he will be doing something that he was never able to accomplish in the Coast loop. Buzz was unable to land on top in any year of his long stay out there.

He saw the clouting title go to Griggs with .328 in 1918, to Rumler, .362, in 1919; to Sheely, .374, in 1920; to Lewis, .403, in 1921; to Strand, .384 and .394, in 1922 and 1923; to Lewis, .392, in 1924; to Paul Waner, .401, in 1925; to Bagwell, .391, in 1926; to Jolley, .397 and .401, in 1927 and 1928, and to Boone, .407 and .448, in 1929 and 1930.

THINGS WERE NOT breaking the Pirates' way the day all the American League clubs waived on Jonathan Thompson Zachary last year when they permitted him to go to the Braves from the Yankees. Yesterday's victory was his fifth over Pittsburgh in six starts. Only Larry French defeated him. In two games this season the 34-year-old southpaw has given the Rovers only two runs, they have not scored against him in the last 12 innings, and as his final win over them in 1930 also was a shutout it follows that they have made only two runs against him in 27 consecutive innings, while in the same period of three games he has held them to a total of only 15 hits.

Chip Helmick

GOOD PITCHING IS one of the reasons why Cumberland is holding down first place in the Middle Atlantic League, and one of the stars of the staff is William (Chip) Helmick, of Carmichaels, Greene County, who recently hung up his third straight win by holding Charleroi to four hits.

Starting as an outfielder with Fairmont when the Middle Atlantic League was launched in 1925, Helmick has been in the circuit ever since except in 1929, when he managed an independent club in Greene County. He has won 65 per cent of his games or more every year, and his complete record since 1925 shows 55 victories against 26 defeats for a grand percentage of .679. He carries a batting punch besides and in only two years has he hit below .300.

THE PIRATES HAVE figured in four shut-out games this season, and Heinie Meine, strangely enough, was their pitcher on every occasion. He beat the Cardinals twice, 1 to 0 and 4 to 0, while losing to Bob Smith and the Cubs, 5 to 0, and to Tom Zachary and the Braves, 4 to 0.

Meine continues to pitch as brilliantly as any pitcher in the league, but his splendid work is being wasted because his teammates are not giving him any help. The Bucs did not score a solitary run for Meine in his last two games and made only eight hits.

NO BETTER SERIES than that between the Pirates and Braves has been played anywhere this season. Three of the four games were decided by a single run and two of them went into extra innings. But the Corsairs could have done more than break even if they had not been so feeble on the offense. The pitchers are delivering in fine style, but the attack calls urgently for a big brace. The club will have to show more punch if the home stay is to be successful. No team can expect to go anywhere hitting .249, the Bucs' club average today.

THE RELEASE OF Claude Willoughby to San Francisco means that Charley Wood is to be retained. The young lefthander has won his way back into the good graces of the management. He is in good shape again after having a bothersome tooth extracted this week, and Manager Ens intends to start him against the Phillies next Monday or Tuesday.

Three weeks ago Wood was headed for the minors, but he showed a pleasing change of spirit, buckled down to hard work at Forbes Field while the Bucs were on the road, and has recovered so much of the pitching stuff that was missing in the early spring that the club chiefs decided to give him another chance.

THE RING RECORD of Richard McRedmond, known as Pat Redmond, who is to meet Primo Carnera in Brooklyn next Wednesday night, is not of a sort to indicate that he will give the Italian giant much trouble. If he stood any chance of winning no doubt he would have been passed up.

Redmond has little to back up his size—6 feet 3 inches and 245 pounds. Reports from Australia, where he appeared several times, are not flattering, and in this country he has been beaten by such men as Ernest Guhring and poor old Jack Renault, while failing to stop such low-raters as Petro Corri, Benny Adell, Ed Keeley and Umberto Torriano.

MacDonald Smith

NO COUNTRY HAS had to watch visitors carrying off the honors in one of its biggest annual sport events so regularly and frequently as Great Britain has seen golfers from America capture her open golf championship. When MacDonald Smith, the favorite, fell down this year, another entrant from the United States, Tommy Armour, fought his way to the front and took the title with a score of 296. Great Britain has the consolation that Armour is a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, but the fact remains that his victory brings the cup to the United States, and it is the tenth time in the last 11 tournaments that the honors have come to this country.

TOPPING SETS BEST RECORD IN CENTURY

CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP.)—Performing just as anticipated, Southern California's Trojans swooped into Stagg Field yesterday, made off with 12 qualifying places for the finals of the National Collegiate Association track and field championships, and remained a prohibitive favorite to retain the title they won last year.

From the time Bill Stokes sped to victory in his heat of the 120-yard hurdles, the opening event, Southern California sailed along, placing at least one man in every test of the eleven tried except the 880-yard run and hammer throw. No Trojan was entered in the latter event.

Frank Wykoff easily won his heat of the 100 in :09.6. Best time honors in the event, however, went to Emmett Topping, a stocky speedster from Loyola University, New Orleans, who made a show of his field to take his heat in :09.5 equaling the accepted world record set by Eddie Tolan, of Michigan in 1929.

The 440-yard dash produced a brace of places for Southern California. Vic Williams, eastern intercollegiate champion, who equaled Ted Meredith's :47.4 last week, took his heat in :48.9, and Art Woessner was second to James Gordon, of Miami, in a :48.7 heat. Tom Hartley, of Washington, counted as Williams' greatest threat, easily won his trial in :49.3. Wykoff did not run in the 220-yard dash, but Delby, a more or less unknown Trojan, came in with a second to qualify.

Ernie Payne, eastern titleholder in the low hurdles, won his trial in :23.6, the fastest of the day, and Bill Carls took his in 24 seconds even. The event appeared to be a battle in the finals between Payne and Jack Keller, Ohio State's sophomore sensation, who won his heat in :23.7.

CITY LEAGUE LEADERS WIN

Homewood and Dormont, scrapping it out for the first-half title in the City League, kept pace last evening when both turned in triumphs.

Homewood walloped Book Shoe, 10 to 4, while Dormont nosed out the up-and-coming North Side Civics, 9 to 8.

In the Greater Pittsburgh League, the Jenkins club defeated Fintex, 10 to 3; Edgewood walloped Whitaker, 8 to 0, behind the shutout hurling of Rosemeyer, and Immaculate Heart downed North Bessemer, 7 to 2.

Linwood was one run better than Turtle Creek in the West Penn League, wininng, 5 to 4, and the Homestead Aces kept their record spotless by bumping off St. Joachim, 6 to 2.

The Homestead Grays blanked the North Side Buicks, 7 to 0, Britt limiting the Buicks to three scattered hits. Bellevue took Avalon, 9 to 2; Verona upset the Murs, 6-0; Kokino tied Brighton, 9-9; T. A. Kings crushed the Gulf Oilers, 25-3; Stowe Indies defeated Rankin, 8-3; Swissvale and Grandview tied, 0-0, and the Crawfords downed Duquesne, 5-4. The D. J. Brodericks defeated Homeville, 6 to 4.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE CITY OF LONDON DOES NOT HAVE A MOVIE HOUSE—The city of London, with its 675 acres of area and less than 100,000 inhabitants, is only one of the 28 boroughs of the capital of Great Britain. The true name of the English metropolis, with its teeming millions of inhabitants, is the Administrative County of London. There are hundreds of cinemas located in the metropolis, but not a single one within the limits of the city of London. EVERY INSECT HAS ONLY THREE PAIRS OF LEGS—The class Insecta of Linnaeus (1758) was co-extensive with the Arthropoda of modern zoologists. The general practice for many years past among naturalists has been to restrict the terms "Insecta" and "insect" to the class of Arthropods with three pairs of legs in the adult condition. Bees, flies, moths, bugs, grasshoppers and springtails are insects, but not spiders, centipedes nor crabs, far less earthworms, and still less slugs, starfishes or coral polyps. KAYOS FEATURE RING SHOW

A quartet of knockouts featured the amateur boxing show at the Keystone Athletic Club last night, staged for the get-together of the Traffic and Transportation Association of Pittsburgh.

Sparky Ewalt, veteran local amateur heavyweight, scored a technical knockout over Tom Hanson, of the Valley Boxing Club, in the first round. Ossie Stewart secured partial revenge in behalf of the Valley organization by stopping Tony Fidelantonin, of Mexico, in the second round. The summary:

118-pound class—Andy Kosel, Valley Boxing Club, won from Harry Conte, Kingsley House, technical knockout, first round.

135-pound class—Bill Southworth, Pastorious A. C., won from Al Sambuci, Valley Boxing Club, technical knockout, first round.

160-pound class—Chuck Rackett, Pittsburgh Lyceum, defeated Steve Lillicotch, Valley Boxing Club, 3 rounds; Ossie Stewart, Valley Boxing Club, knocked out Tony Fidelantonin, unattached, second round.

Heavyweight—Sparky Ewalt, Pastorious A. C., won from Tom Hanson, Valley Boxing Club, technical knockout, first round.

GUNN ENTERS TITLE ROUND

WILMINGTON, Del., June 6.—(AP.)—Watts Gunn, of the Oakmont Club, Pittsburgh, medalist in Wilmington Country Club's annual invitation golf tournament, has entered the semi-final round with two victories. He defeated F. S. Wilcov, Jr., 4 and 3, and R. Dunn, of Landsdowne, 1 up.

W. M. McIntire, of Rolling Green, defeated W. B. Denham, 3 and 2, and Austin M. Porter, 3 and 2, to win the right to meet Gunn today.

STAR UNDER KNIFE

Walter (Mike) Milligan, guard on Jock Sutherland's Pitt football team, was operated upon in the St. Francis Hospital yesterday for appendicitis. He went through the ordeal without any serious effects and is getting along nicely.

Yale Polo Team Gets 20-Goal Handicap

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—Yale's crack polo team will be forced to overcome a handicap of nine or more goals in every match it plays in the intercollegiate championships starting June 13 at the Rockaway Hunting Club on Long Island.

Announcement of the lineups and handicaps of the six competing teams reveals that Yale will be burdened with a 20-goal handicap, even without Stewart Iglehart, a seven-goal man, on the field. Iglehart will be used only in an emergency.

Princeton, rated at 11 goals, leads the other contenders in potential strength.

STARS BATTLE AT BELMONT

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—It will be the old story of East meets West at Belmont Park today, when the Audley Farm's Gallant Knight, handicap champion of the West, attempts to match strides with James Butler's Questionnaire and five other classy Eastern thoroughbreds in the 45th running of the Suburban Handicap.

Although the field does not measure up to the best that ever paraded to the post in quest of the $10,000 purse, the race should furnish a stirring battle between Gallant Knight and Questionnaire with at least two of the remaining five rated as contenders.

Questionnaire, with Sonny Workman up, has been assigned the top weight of 128 pounds, but probably will go to the post the odds-on-choice. Gallant Knight has been asked to pick up four pounds less and will be the second choice at 8 to 5 or shorter.

MRS. RILEY WINS IN LOCAL PLAY

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Mrs. L. G. Riley, star woman golfer of the Edgewood Country Club, added laurels to her crown yesterday when she was one of two among the best linkswomen in the district to break 90 during the one-day tournament at her home layout of the Women's Golf Association.

Mrs. Riley won low gross and low net with her splendid 84, and Anjeanette Hunter, of Oakmont, former West Penn champion and winner last week, had an 85. With Edgewood wind-swept and slow from the previous day's heavy rain, the scores were remarkably fine. Mrs. William H. Duff, II, of Oakmont, was third in the first division, having a tally of 92-10—82.

Mrs. L. C. Lewars, Pittsburgh Field Club, won in the second flight with a net 76, while Mrs. E. W. Judy, of St. Clair, was second with a 77, and Mrs. J. A. Lowry, Longue Vue, third, with a net 78.

Three Edgewood players won in the third division, Mrs. W. C. Maxwell copping with a net 82; Mrs. C. P. Sidwell being next with 83 and Mrs. C. S. Ewing, third, with 86.

MAX PUNISHES RING MATES

CONNEAUT LAKE PARK, Pa., June 6.—(AP.)—Max Schmeling handed severe pummelings yesterday to two of his sparring partners, Tony Marullo, of New Orleans, and Pedro Lopez, of Oklahoma City, and finished the day with bag work and calisthenics.

Schmeling, training here for a heavyweight title bout with W. L. Stribling at Cleveland next month, will box again today and tomorrow.

The Braves have departed and there is no sorrow in the Oakland Orchard over their going. Bill McKechnie's keen sharpshooters left a flock of terrible batting averages in their wake as they broke even with the Freebooters in the best-pitched series any local fans have witnessed since the days when there was plenty of science in the game.

And, who have we with us today, but the Phearless Phils, augmented by none other than Richard the Lionhearted, himself, and in person! Daredevil Dick Bartell, reached town just in time to get first-hand information on the passing of Claude Willoughby, who was a part of the big deal of the past winter.

WILLOUGHBY SOLD

Curve-ball Claudius was sold last night to the San Francisco club, of the Pacific Coast League, Willoughby and Shortstop Tommy Thevenow came to the Buccos in exchange for Bartell. Thevenow was benched some time ago on account of a severe batting slump. So the lively Bartell is the only active performer among the three athletes involved in the swap.

The Quakers do not seem to be going anywhere in particular and if they did have any specific terminal it would have to be a lofty spot in the first division to steal the play away from Connie Mack's great team. Maybe Burt Shotton will be able to make a good showing, but Quaker City folks are thinking largely of the dear Athletics these days.

Well, anyhow, the two representatives of the Keystone State will open a three-game series at Forbes Field this afternoon. Remy Kremer will twirl for the Buccos and he may be opposed by Big Jim Elliott, the powerful southpaw who won a hair-line decision over Pirates in Philly a short time ago.

The Oaklanders gave another pathetic exhibition at the plate yesterday as they sustained a 4 to 0 defeat at the hands of Tom Zachary and the Tribe. Heinie Meine was just about as clever as the veteran lefthander, he holding the McKechnie Clan to four hits in eight rounds, but Heinie deviated from the shutout lane in the seventh and before the inning was ended the Braves had enough runs to decide the battle. Three tallies were pushed over in this round and Walter Berger

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Well, it's a good thing Tommy Connolly's been appointed to scout for new umpires. Up to now the guys that did the umpire scouting picked anybody that could jerk his thumb and look neat in a blue serge suit. There's been such bum decisions pulled this season. I often wondered if some of the umps weren't wearing in their whiskbroom pocket. I see a lot of experts are waiting for Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg to blow up for the A's. When Connie Mack sends those pitchers up to the well so often they are bound to crack sometime unless Connie is making 'em use a tin pail.

RUTH TIES COCHRANE FOR A. L. SWAT LEAD

Local Net Association Inter-Club League to Inaugurate Play Today

BABE'S HOMER BRINGS YANKS VICTORY

Associated Press

Despite a recent injury, Babe Ruth is in the game every day, fielding well and, as usual, providing thrills.

He went to bat against St. Louis yesterday with his team a run behind in the ninth inning and the tying counter on base and drove one of Sammy Gray's offerings into the rightfield bleachers at the Yankee Stadium for a home run that won the game for the Yankees 8 to 7. Then he led a parade around the bases while the fans poured out of the stands to follow him. The homer gave him a tie with Mickey Cochrane for the major league batting leadership with a .397 average.

SENATORS LOSE

Washington lost a tough one to the Detroit Tigers and George Uhle 1 to 0 in 11 innings. Pitching the entire distance in a duel with Sam Jones, Uhle gave only five hits and not a walk.

The champion Philadelphia Athletics also played an extra-inning game, losing to Chicago 7-5 as Lew Fonseca hit a homer in the twelfth and the Sox followed it up with another run. Boston halted Cleveland's winning streak after 10 games in the fourth American League contest, winning 4 to 3 with an early attack on Willis Hudlin.

The first and second place teams of the National League, St. Louis and New York, provided the leading struggle of the elder circuit, battling back and forth for 10 innings before the Cardinals won out, 8 to 7, and increased their lead to three and one-half games.

BRAVES, ROBINS WIN

The scrap for third place became closer as the Boston Braves and Brooklyn Robins advanced a game on Chicago, the Robins took advantage of Cub misplays and their own six-hit pitching by Phelps and Quinn to beat Chicago while the Braves shut out Pittsburgh, 4 to 0.

The Cincinnati Reds put together their second three-game winning streak of the year by trouncing the Phillies for the third successive time, 9 to 2. Silas Johnson, who has pitched four of the Reds' 12 victories, held the Phils to seven hits.

ANDERSON EASY FOR HERRERA

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Tony Herrera, flashy Mexican lightweight star of Chicago, won as he pleased in his 10-round return bout with Eddie Anderson, veteran of Wyoming, at Hickey Park, Millvale, last night. The bout was the feature of the show washed out by rain the night before and drew a good-sized crowd.

Anderson won only the first round, in which he got off with a rush and crowded Tony, slambanging away to the head and body. Thereafter Tony won all off by himself. He had Eddie groggy a number of times and had him battered and bleeding, but let up on him long enough to permit the latter to fight him off in spurts, and it appeared as if he could have registered a knockout had he been so inclined. He leveled off with a few straight rights to the jaw just before the final bell which demonstrated what he could have accomplished if he had been hard pressed. He was satisfied to win decisively without the knockout, however.

TONY PUSHED DOWN

Herrera entered the ring with a plaster over the bridge of his nose and it was not knocked off until the seventh round and then the old cut under it was revealed as healed. The eighth round saw Anderson stage a rally during which he pushed Herrera back off balance to a sitting position, but Tony was not hurt and soon resumed command of the fighting. Herrera weighed 136½ pounds and Anderson 138.

The semi-final put on after the main bout was almost a replica of the latter event in that the ultimate winner lost the first round and then won handily. Angelo Vergona, of Swissvale, 131, crowded Frankie Bojorski, Erie southpaw 133¼, about the ring, to take the opening session and thereafter was on the receiving end as Bojorski literally cut him to pieces with a rugged, two-fisted attack at close quarters. It was Bojorski's first appearance here and he made a good impression.

FRAZIER DEFEATS FARONE

Don Frazier, Hill Negro, 130, shaded Al Farone, of McKees Rocks, 131, dropping him twice momentarily, but the crowd booed the judges' decision in Don's favor. Frenchy Jennings, of Carrick, 124½, looked good in stopping Al Rettinger, of Dormont, 125¼, midway in the third round, of the opener. The bell saved Rettinger following a count of nine in the second round and when he went down again in the third the referee stopped the bout.

Al Grayber and Red Robinson alternated as referees and Jock Simco and Frank Ferris were the judges. The Frankie Genaro-Jimmy Thomas bout scheduled for next Thursday night has been set back one week because Genaro is suffering from a cold and the club is seeking a new main bout to take its place.

Cousin Jo Choice For Illinois Oaks

CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP)—Eight 3-year-old fillies, headed by Charles Nuckols' Cousin Jo, were named to run in the Illinois Oaks, a $10,000 added feature, at Washington Park today.

Cousin Jo, winner of the Kentucky Oaks at Churchill Downs, was held at even money in the overnight wagering, with Sunny Lassie from Mrs. William Ziegler's Middleburg stable, the second choice at 8 to 5.

Texas Indian Hurls No-Run, No-Hit Win

GALVESTON, Tex., June 6.—(AP)—Chief Eul Moore, full-blood Cherokee pitcher of the San Antonio Indians of the Texas League, last night let the Galveston Buccaneers down without a hit. The score was 3 to 0.

Moore is pitching his first season in a Class A league.

STOGIES END COLT STREAK

The winning streak of the Cumberland Colts came to a very abrupt and decisive ending yesterday as the Colts dropped both ends of a doubleheader to the Wheeling Stogies. Wheeling won the first game, 5 to 4, and then, although outhit, 9 to 5, took the second, 2 to 1.

Scottdale missed a chance to gain on the leaders by splitting a dual engagement with Charleroi. The Scotties won the first fray, 9 to 5, but dropped the second, 7 to 3, although they outhit the Guys, 11 to 6.

Charleston defeated Altoona 2 to 1, in what was to have been the first game of a doubleheader, but rain interfered and the second encounter was called off.

Huntington defeated Clarksburg, 6 to 0. Browne hurling the only shutout win of the day. He limited the Generals to three safe blows.

Beckley walloped Johnstown again, 12 to 6, and Fairmont nosed out Hagerstown, 5 to 4.

BABE RUTH LOSES

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., June 6.—(AP)—Prince Saunders, 130 pounds, of Chicago, won a decision over Babe Ruth, 129½, of Louisville, in their 10-round main-event bout here last night.

LEWISBURG, Pa., June 6.—(AP)—A three-hanger by Ammerman in the second with two on base accounted for all of Bucknell's markers as the upstate team lost to Temple, 7 to 3, here yesterday.

ARMOUR WINS ON HEART

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland, June 6.—(AP)—Tommy Armour was just a lanky Scotch youth of 19, a student and fine golfing prospect at Edinburgh University, when he went to war with the famous Black Watch regiment of Highlanders in 1914.

He saw some of the bitterest fighting of the conflict with the British Tank Corps and came home with shrapnel wounds in his leg and arm, the sight of his left eye impaired.

They said it was too bad, but Tommy's golfing days were over. Whereupon, with a Scot's determination, he came to the United States in 1920, developed one of the finest swings in the game, despite his physical handicaps, and achieved international fame.

Armour's ability to play his best in the pinches helped him come from behind to beat Cooper in the playoff for the national open at Oakmont in 1927. It was conspicuous in his par-cracking last round at Carnoustie yesterday to win the British open golf championship.

In a great international finish which saw the leading niblick wielders of five nations in the thick of things up to almost the last putt, Tommy captured the cup it seemed certain Jurado would win. The little Argentine led the field at the end of the third round with 220, three strokes better than MacDonald Smith and Arthur Havers, the closest competitors and five strokes better than Armour.

Jurado led in fact until the last two holes, two of the sternest tests of golf in the world, through whose fairways coils and twists the rushing Barry Burn.

After Armour and Jurado came Gene Sarazen, the first of the American homebreds, and Percy Alliss, British-bred pro of a Berlin club. Each had 298. Tied for fifth place were Johnny Farrell and MacDonald Smith, of the United States, with 299. Then came the first of the British professionals, the Ryder Cupper, W. H. Davies, sharing seventh place with the Argentine youngster Marco Churio, with 300.

Armour Realizes Ambition of Boyhood

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland, June 6.—(AP)—"I have achieved my boyhood ambition," Tommy Armour said as he kissed his wife in their hotel room just after winning the British open golf championship.

"When I ran about on the braid hills of Edinburgh as a small boy," he continued reminiscently, "and later came to play many rounds over Carnoustie I had reams that one day I really might get my name inscripted on the same cup as that great golfer, Harry Vardon, who has won it there six times."

M'TIERNAN STAR IN DEFEAT

Overanxiousness to score a knockout victory in his New York debut, against Ignacio Ara, the Spaniard, in Madison Square Garden, on Thursday night, was responsible for the technical knockout defeat of Buck McTiernan, Swissvale middleweight star, according to his manager, Bunny Buntach.

According to Buntach, McTiernan had no trouble outboxing Ara in the early rounds and stung the Spaniard, who is strictly a puncher, in the third round. In the sixth, he again felt Ara weakening and made up his mind to try to finish him with a spurt in the seventh. Buntach said upon his return from the battle.

In trying to cross a right for a knockout or knockdown, McTiernan left himself open for one of Ara's rights and went down for a count of nine. Bunny said, and he did not recover from the blow. The bell saved him in the seventh round, but he was an easy victim for Ara in the eighth, when the referee intervened after McTiernan had gone down two more times.

McTiernan made a hit with the spectators, and will be used in the Garden again soon by Matchmaker Tom McArdle. Coming into New York almost unheralded, and with his opponent a big favorite, Buck surprised the talent with his boxing skill up to the time of the knockout.

Stormy weather and Memorial Day have combined to roll back inauguration of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League campaign no less than a fortnight, but if showers predicted for the current week-end can be staved off until this evening, the 16 outfits entered in the loop competition for 1931 will ease into action on eight district net lots today.

The champion Edgewood array will initiate hostilities abroad, Don Mattern's re-enforced University Club crew being slated to entertain Capt. Frank Smith and his titleholders in the premier event of Section I. Meanwhile at Mount Lebanon, Dr. Dave O'Loughlin and his youthful P. A. A. performers will try conclusions with the 1930 runner-up host of Russ Unger in what looms as a quite evenly matched tussle, both teams having lost veteran standbys with Al Bialas absent from the Winged Head line-up and Neal Rumsey missing from the Lebanon troupe.

NEW STARS PLAY

Other upper division tilts promising pretty tennis are the South Hills-College Hill session at Beaver Falls and the Westinghouse-Stanton Heights debate in the Stanton enclosure. Numerous new faces will be discernible in the South Hills and Westinghouse entourages, with College Hill and the Heightsmen depending on old reliables. The dope, incidentally, favors the veteran squads, though by no means overwhelmingly.

In Section II, the crack Westinghouse Seconds, victors a year ago, are at home to Charley Lyon's West Penn Power aggregation and look good to cop, though the Powerites should be stronger than of yore. Sam Keller will lead a hard-hitting Duquesne Library contingent to Mt. Washington in quest of flying start at the expense of John Ferrick's consistent Washington Heights followers.

Two newcomers to circuit battling will tangle on the Hilltop, whither Bob Lampus will bring his imposing Bellevue delegation for shot at Dick Creighton's lately-collected South Hills Seconds. A third P. T. A. debutante, Rockwood, will land first taste of combat in clash with Howard Moore's slashing College Avenue force on the College-and-Walnut rectangles. Here's hoping for sunshine!

PHILS TO FACE BUCS TODAY

made the triumph more secure in the eighth when he walloped a homer over the left-field wall.

Meine worked four hitless rounds after the battle started and the Braves owned just one safety as the seventh began. Heinie had three balls and two strikes on the dangerous Berger when the big fellow walked. Bill McKechnie wanted nothing better than a sacrifice from Red Worthington, but after failing in the bunt attempt, Red surprised his boss most agreeably by hitting a little single into right that sent Berger to third.

The Pirate infield came part way in for Sheely and Earl drove a bounder to the right of Sankey which Ben fielded. Berger hustled plateward and was there in plenty of time to beat Sankey's questionable toss. The other runners reached the first two basses with Richbourg ready to swing.

P. Waner, playing first base, made a fine knockdown of Richbourg's liner and turned in a force play at second. Johnny Neun, who ran for Sheely, hustled to third and both he and Richbourg rode home when Bill Cronin drove a double out to the scoreboard.

Cronin was unexpectedly tossed into the game. The hard-working Al Spohrer was knocked out by a foul tip from Bill Regan's bat in the fifth, and he had to be carried off the field. He was quickly revived in the clubhouse, however, and was able to leave with the Braves last night for Cincinnati.

Rev. Woodsin Wins Longue Vue Play

The annual spring tournament under seven-eights handicaps at the Longue Vue Country Club was won by the Rev. William M. Woodsin, of the Third United Presbyterian Church, who defeated George D. Brech, Jr., 4 and 2, in the final round, played yesterday.

A field of 48 members competed in the tournament during the past month.

Lott, Van Ryn Win In Austria Matches

VIENNA, June 6.—(AP)—The United States touring tennis team of George Lott and Johnny Van Ryn made a clean sweep of yesterday's matches with Austria.

Lott defeated F. Matejka 2-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, while Van Ryn beat Artens, 6-1, 6-1, 6-0.

HILLSMEN TOP SCHENLEY

South Hills High School's baseball nine champions of Section II of the City League, drew first blood in the annual series for the league title with Schenley last evening at Forbes Field by defeating the Bellefielders, defending champions, 4 to 3.

The first game of the series, played on Tuesday, resulted in a 2-2 deadlock. The third game will be played next Tuesday and the fourth, if necessary, on Friday.

FERRELL'S HIT WINS

One was out and Billy Lantz, star South Hills hurler, was on second in the last of the ninth inning when Ferrell, Tunnelite shortstop, smashed a long double to left center and the South Hills pitcher scampered over with the winning run last evening. The game broke up another hurlers' duel.

South Hills scored two runs in the first inning on a walk, a single, a double steal and Reinheimer's double. The Bellefielders scored in the third on two errors and a fielder's choice, but South Hills got this one back when Regan singled, stole second and scored on Mihm's passed ball.

SCORE TIED

In the fourth, a walk, a stolen base and Qualley's single produced another Schenley run and the score was tied in the ninth when Lentz threw a wild one and Sanford, a pinch-runner, scored. Then came the South Hills blowoff and the victory.

Stratton and Lentz again opposed one another on the slab. Neither was able to fan as many as they did in the first game, both whiffing seven. Regan, South Hills' first sacker, led in the attack, with two hits and as many runs. The lineup:

FOUL TIP FELLS BRAVES' CATCHER . . . ABOVE, SPOHRER CARRIED FROM SCENE

A foul tip from the bat of Bill Regan, of the Pirates, doubled up Al Spohrer, Braves' catcher, in the fifth inning of the final game of the series between the teams at Forbes Field, and he had to be taken from the field. Photos show Spohrer on the ground before being aided and then being carried to the clubhouse.

Between Rounds

The best-balanced preliminary card of the year so far backs up the Baby Joe Gans-Jackie Brady main bout at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Monday night. Marty Gornick, popular Whitaker lightweight, who has been winning the approval of the fans in uncertain manner in his recent starts, boxes Al Ghan, of Columbus, in the eight-round semi-final. Mickey Solomen, of Youngstown, a former middleweight, headliner is in the second bout with Carl Minebano, of Braddock, and Carl Seako, belting middleweight, of Uniontown, meets Anson Green, Homestead Negro, in the opener.

The National Boxing Association will appoint the judges and the referee for the Eddie Shea-Freddie Miller bout in Cincinnati next Thursday night. Shea's first start since he suffered cuts on his eyes in a bout with Steve Smith at Motor Square Garden some weeks ago.

All of the preliminaries to the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling championship fight in Cleveland June 13 will be five-rounders, with the windup slated for 15 rounds.

Freddie Boylstein, of Kittanning, boxes Young Lyle, and Willie Barrow meets Johnny Plail in preliminaries to the K. O. Kelly-Joe Walters bout at Franklin, Pa., Monday night. Tiger West and Billy Bruns also are on the card.

Eddie Hebner, of Clairton, and U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, will box the six-round semi-final to the Teddy Welch-Joey Spiegel battle at Uniontown next Friday night. Johnny Warner, of Clairton, and Sammy Paris, of the Hill, are in the second bout, and Lad Griffiths and Phil McCallahan, a pair of heavyweights, will box the opener.

Rudy Dusek, of Oklahoma, who meets Floyd Marshall, of California, in one of the preliminaries to the Tiny Roebuck-Vanka Zelezniak wrestling bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Tuesday night, comes here with a close match with Jim Londos, the heavyweight champion, under his belt. Londos required 58 minutes to win the bout.

Jim McGirr, McKeesport promoter, who was contemplating staging a few outdoor shows at Husher Field, near Monessen, has given up the plan, and says he will confine his summer fistic activities to being a spectator at shows.

Jackie Rodgers and Johnny Dunn have been signed for their fifth meeting in the East Liverpool (O.) Bowl, Tuesday, June 16.

Young Mack Star Hurt in Slide

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—(AP.)—Dib Williams, youthful shortstop of the Philadelphia Athletics, who was injured in stealing second base in Thursday's game with Chicago, was found to have a small chip on a bone in his right ankle which will keep him idle for an indefinite time.

Boley and Cochrane, who have been out of the game with injuries, were back in uniform yesterday. Neither is able to play, however, although Cochrane took a slight workout before the game with the White Sox.

Arizona Poloists Play to Draw

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—The University of Arizona's hard-hitting polo team battled to a 5-all tie with the Governor's Island quartet at Governors Island yesterday.

Playing on borrowed mounts as they have in all their games in the East, the southwestern team gave a fine display of mallet work to run up a 3-1 lead after the first three chukkers.

Governors Island scored three goals in the fourth period to tie the score at 4-4 and each team scored once in the sixth and final chukker.

PITT TO PLAY IRISH IN '33 AND '34

By JESS CARVER

If the University of Pittsburgh can engineer a suitable football contract with an eastern university, the Panther gridiron program for the next four years will be pretty well set.

W. Don Harrison, Pitt's director of athletics, who is getting stouter and smarter every day, has announced the signing of a new agreement with Notre Dame, calling for a continuation of gridiron relations between the Panthers and the Irish for the next four years. The present agreement runs out in '32, and the new one will take effect in 1933.

Pitt will play at South Bend in '33 and the Irish will come here in 1934.

The contract was drawn up and decided upon here this week when Jess Harper, the new Irish athletic head, was sojourning in the city with Harrison and Buddy Overend, of Tech. A new contract with Tech was signed at the same time.

The Panthers have been casting about for an eastern opponent that will mean first, prestige, and second, dough-re-mi. It may be that a long term contract will be signed with Army, Columbia, Dartmouth and New York University also are being considered.

Fight Results

At Hickey Park, Millvale—Tony Herrera defeated Eddie Anderson, 10 rounds; Frankie Bojorski defeated Angelo Vergona, 8 rounds; Don Frazier defeated Al Farone, 8 rounds; French Jennings won by technical knockout over Al Rettinger, 3 rounds.

At Eau Claire, Wis.—Prince Saunders defeated Babe Ruth, 10 rounds.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

When people ask Ray Archibald, the gasoline man, who has recovered completely from the effects of being the first president of the Mid-Atlantic Baseball League, how business is, he admits it's only fair, whereas it's good. He says for awhile he used to report that business was good but that nobody would believe him.

Recently an attorney, trying to prevent the extradition of his client to New York, argued before Judge Gardner that Gov. Fred Green of Michigan had refused a similar request for extradition. The attorney didn't know that Judge Gardner had a fixed and none too pleasant recollection of Gov. Green. When he was district attorney, Judge Gardner spent a week in Michigan trying to have a prisoner extradited to Pennsylvania. Green refused.

With the aid of a spy we have solved the mystery which we prefer to call "The Mystery of the Eighteen Swaths of White, Yellow, Red and Blue Paints, Each Eight Inches Wide and Twelve Feet Long." Probably you have noticed these 18 swaths on the Allies boulevard near Pius street. They were swathed there by 18 paint manufacturers, and they're samples, used to mark traffic line. The swath which stands up best under traffic will, possibly, get the city contract for such things.

If you think graduating from a university is simple, you're mistaken. We've seen the instructions issued the current class at Pitt, and here are some of the details the pedagogues must bother with:

"Wear your cap straight—not at an angle.

"Be sure the tassel of your cap is on the right (not on the left) side. When receiving your degree, reach for your diploma with your right hand and change the tassel from the right to the left side with your left hand.

"Do not fuss with your clothing.

"Please do not begin to exchange diplomas until seated, as this confusion is very noticeable to those seated in the balcony."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 6.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Can't you see a little political foresight in Mr. Coolidge's quitting writing? No country would be cuckoo enough to nominate a columnist for president. Mr. Coolidge's great following was built by not talking and not by saying something every day. He took it up through necessity and not preference. When will this country that wastes billions on everything, finally do justice to a retiring president and allow him, for life, at least

Elect 'em for six years, do not allow 'em to succeed themselves—that will keep their minds off politics and the life's salary will relieve 'em of any worry of the future.

Yours, WILL.

Crime Pictures Make Screen Fortunes for Three Talented Actors

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 6.

Whatever evils may be laid at the door of gang pictures, they at least have made the screen fortunes of three fine actors, Edward G. Robinson, James Cagney and Leo Carillo.

All of the three are now drawing cards in places where their stage reputations had not penetrated.

Carrillo steps into another gangster role in "Homicide Squad," which the veteran George Melford will direct for Universal.

James Cagney

Like other recent films dealing with the underworld, this story gives the law the best of it. Carrillo, as an Italian gangster, is caught up in the police dragnet and pays the penalty for his misdeeds.

The film goes into production after the star has had a brief rest from his work in "Lasca of the Rio Grande."

DOGS HAVING DAY

When the talkies first came in, the owners of the trained animals were practically frozen out. Now, strangely enough, their business is thriving more than it ever did. J. H. Kerr, proprietor of one menagerie, has five men working constantly on sets. His four-legged and feathered actors include a trained skunk, an eagle which will scream on signal, an owl that hoots on command and many other varieties. In his spare time he is training wolves to howl. (Editor's note: One of Arthur Caesar's gags might help.)

LATEST GOSSIP

Since the figures were printed on her new salary, Ann Harding has received a number of threatening letters from people out of work. The usual touches have multiplied many fold. . . . Adolphe Menjou hinted to all his friends that he wanted a cigaret case on his first birthday. But when the time came around, none was forthcoming. A little injured, Adolphe went down and bought one. He had it inscribed: "To Adolphe, on his birthday, from his greatest admirer, Adolphe Menjou." . . . Lewis Stone also complains about getting various ties. It develops that, aside from film roles, he has worn the same pattern of tie—dark red with purple stripe—for 30 years. Not counting, of course, the black or white bows for evening. . . . Cecil B. DeMille has twin houses in Laughlin Park. On his return from Europe, he plans to turn one of them into the office of Cecil B. DeMille Productions. . . . Fifi Dorsay leaves here June 14 to open a vaudeville engagement in Louisville. . . . Paramount's shifting of production to the West Coast will bring Miriam Hopkins out here. Her husband, Austin Parker has preceded her. He wrote Constance Bennett's story, "Dangerous to Love," and will do an original for Ann Harding.

Aldine Shows Tropics

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"East is east and west is west, and never the twain shall meet" provides both the lyrical theme and title of the current photoplay in the Aldine—"Never the Twain Shall Meet." It is the screen version of Peter B. Kyne's novel of the occident and orient, dealing with the sharp cleavage between, not only eastern and western people, but between their emotional natures. Like oil and water, they do not mix, but clash, love failing to be effective as a binder.

Leslie Howard, popular and competent young stage actor, who made his screen debut in "Outward Bound," represents the West as a young business man into whose hands the guardianship of a South Seas girl is placed by her father. Sharp guesser, you. He does fall victim to her childlike and savage charm, and his fiance is forgotten—for a few months. Then she turns up on the island in the Pacific where he has followed the native girl, and her visit spurs him to drag himself up from degradation—the spell of the tropics—and to return home.

The fascination that lures him is made easily explainable in the person of Conchito Montenegro, youthful actress from Spain. Most agreeable to the eye, this lass can sing—also dance in the best South Seas manner. And she has that exotic way. A comer.

C. Aubrey Smith, Karen Morley and Clyde Cook have the other principal roles.

Dramatic situations are well worked up and there are some fine tropical scenes.

Friend of Wagner, Von Gross, Dies at 87

BAYREUTH, Germany, June 6.—(AP.)—Geheimrat Adolf von Gross, a friend of the late Richard and Cosima Wagner, died in a hospital last night after a short illness at the age of 87.

Von Gross was noted for his efforts to promote the music of the great composer. When Wagner died in 1883 and left his wife prostrate with grief, Von Gross undertook to present his music to the public, later becoming chairman of the Bayreuth Festival Committee.

Gloria Really Glorious In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

You do not expect a merry and high-spirited comedy when the title of the picture is "Indiscreet," and you have been warned beforehand that it deals with a lady's past. You rejoice all the more when you find that the indiscretion is chiefly in the title, and that Gloria Swanson is a glorious comedienne despite her past.

George Seibel

It happened this way. When Gloria discovered that the handsome and debonair Monroe Owsley wasn't true to her, she turned over a new leaf on New Years Eve. And a few years later she meets the handsomer and debonairer Ben Lyon, who is true to her—or is going to be.

She tells him all—and they are going to be married.

Then comes cute Barbara Kent, who is Gloria's younger sister, and she has become secretly engaged in Paris to Gloria's first adorer, the base wretch!

TRAGEDY? NO INDEED!

But we do not have denunciations, reproaches, revelations and all that. The tangled knot is cut by comedy. And such comedy! The way Gloria makes the family of her false lover think insanity runs in her own family is screamingly funny. And the way she gets on the ocean liner is recommended for a cheap transatlantic vacation.

Nothing could be funnier except the episodes of her courtship with the tender and true Ben Lyon—the comedy of the ice cream cones and the merry drama of the baseball game with broken windows.

Gloria twinkles, bubbles, sparkles and wears some of the most entrancing frocks, negligees, evening gowns and merry smiles.

STAGE FIREWORKS

In the stage show there is a grand display of fireworks at the finish which ought to boom the business in electric bulbs. Those unbreakable bounders, Mitchell and Durant, furnish the acrobatic comedy, and it's a mystery that they are whole. Dolores, Eddy and Douglas furnish the adagio dancing, graceful and thrilling as ever. Louis Barrison does a stunning long-legged dance on stilts. The symphony orchestra plays a medley of the most gorgeous operatic favorites, while Dick Leibert has dug all the June and Moon songs out of the almanac.

So everybody forgot all about gangsters and booze and was as happy as Gloria Swanson.

Another large picnic crowd was expected at Kennywood Park today, the East Pittsburgh schools being scheduled for their annual outing. Special street cars were to transport the pupils, their teachers and parents to and from the park. An entertainment program will be prepared by a committee including Thomas E. Hampton and M. A. Joe Morgan In Fulton, Sheridan

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Who said prohibition! "Ten Nights in a Barroom" has been dug out of the dusty, foamy past and spread across the talk screen. It is now the feature in both the Fulton and the Sheridan Square.

But the old melodrama has been modernized and everything. Joe Morgan still has a terrible struggle with Demon Rum, but his family doesn't slip to the depth of such poverty it knew in the old stage versions. And daughter doesn't die, but lives to marry a nice young man.

There are other differences, too. The barroom burns down before your eyes. And there is a rough and tumble fight in which sodden Morgan and Saloonkeeper Slade roll about the floor and whack each other in grand style.

William Farnum, still pretty spry in spite of the years, goes his usual dramatic way as Joe Morgan, and Tom Santschi portrays Slade. It was these two actors who put on that big fight in "The Spoilers" years and years ago, you may recall.

Somehow, "Ten Nights in a Barroom" doesn't go over so well. Modern, like near-beer, its "kick" is gone.

Stanley Has Boy Actor In Film

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Jackie Cooper, boy-actor of "Skippy" fame, knows more about sobs than any sob sister in captivity. And when it comes to sincere, honest acting he can show grownup Hollywood a thing or two. He demonstrates this again in "Young Donovan's Kid," new picture in the Stanley. Richard Dix is co-starred and Fred Niblo, the "Ben Hur" director, told how it was to be done.

"Young Donovan's Kid" is a picture of human hardboiledness and human sentiment. But there is nothing cheap or tawdry about the sentiment. It is just good old heart appeal dished out with acting and directorial restraint. It is a picture you can lose yourself in, so you know it must be good.

PRE-VOLSTEAD THUGS

The story, based on Rex Beach's "Big Brother," concerns a tough guy's love for an adopted brother. This love becomes so strong that the tough guy eventually reforms. A welfare agency butts in and wants to take the child away from the man, figuring the boy would be better off in the environment of an orphanage. And this leads into tear-wringing episodes.

There is an underworld atmosphere to the picture, but it is the underworld of pre-Volstead thugs and not modern day racketeers. Which is a change.

Frank Sheridan gives a sympathetic portrayal of a clergyman and Marion Shilling is all right as the heroine.

SIX MONTHS MORE

Dick Powell presents "Sky High" as his stage show and makes the announcement that he has signed up for six months more in our town. Which announcement had the folks applauding. Webb and Douglas, a couple of funny fellows, who have spilled their humorous line in these parts before, get a big hand. Their act gets over the border from good taste in spots. Performing pigeons and Sylvia Froos, a pleasant singer, are also on the bill. Mr. Powell sings some songs and Bernie Armstrong organlogues around the world on a moonlight saving time schedule.

Enright Film Has Lytell

By JAMES BAUBIE

"The Single Sin," opening in the Enright yesterday, is literally described by its title. The same picture, with minor variations, has been viewed on the screens of Pittsburgh during the past 10 or 15 years. It's a threadbare plot with poor dialogue.

You know the kind—bad girl turns good and marries her employer; then outcrops her business companion of the old days to blackmail her. But it all ends happily, if not too soon.

Key Johnson is the good-bad girl and Bert Lytell, whose ability is very much wasted in this film, shares what honors there may be in the production.

Its a picture whose beginning you wouldn't wait to see if you were lucky enough to come in late.

"IF YOU SEND HER AWAY—I am going with her!"

A savage little beauty who threw herself into his arms and told him that she loved him—quite unlike the cool formality of the girl to whom he was engaged. No wonder his pulse pounded through his veins as love said, "come to the South Seas!"

Here is impetuous youth throwing to the winds every heritage of family tradition, business achievement and the ties of a select social set to follow the call of love to the South Seas. A mad, primitive love that blinded him to the plea of a father who knew that "East is East and West is West!"

CLARA BOW :-: Madcap Star Arouses Sympathy of Hollywood

Thousands of Movie Fans Demand 'It' Girl Must Come Back To Get Royal Welcome

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service.

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc. Reproduction in part or in whole prohibited.)

CHAPTER XVII

I regret to say that our own Hollywood is not free from certain papers that use advertising as a weapon. I also regret to say that gossip is frequently printed which is untrue, and spiteful articles are made public. Fortunately, papers of this kind never last long. For the time being people back of such a paper may ingratiate themselves into the confidence of film people, but it never lasts long. I have seen so many of these little sheets come and go.

A wave of sympathy has spread over the film capital of Hollywood for Clara such as has never been given to any other person. Letters by the thousands have poured into the office of this writer asking if there is not something that can be done to help her.

Clara must come back, the fans declare. She must be given a welcome such as no girl has ever had on the screen. She must be made to feel that all the world realizes that these accusing articles are a mass of lies.

Cruel, Unjust

It is cruel and unjust to sacrifice a girl 25 years old, whose life has been one long series of tragedies, simply because an unscrupulous person chooses to tell lies.

In sat in B. P. Schulberg's office while he told me that he had plans for a big story for Clara Bow. You can imagine my astonishment when I read in the newspapers that Mr. Schulberg had said in a Denver interview that Clara is leaving Paramount. Knowing her as I do, I realized that her pride would not let her continue if Mr. Schulberg showed any indifference about her screen career.

Probably Mr. Schulberg felt that he was being kind to Clara in permitting her to leave his company. Certainly Paramount has given her some pretty poor stories during the past year or two. Give Clara a good story and watch her come back.

I thought I would find her crushed over Ben Schulberg's ill-timed interview. On the contrary Clara is relieved.

"I am glad that I can get well," she said, "without worrying about pictures. I know that Paramount has lost money because of my state of mind and health. I don't want to cause them any more inconvenience."

Nightmares

Her salary automatically stopped when she was taken sick.

"I knew that I wasn't giving my best to my work," she said. "I hated to give up 'The Secret Call,' but I couldn't sleep. I wakened up at night feeling as if I must scream and yell. I kept thinking of those things printed in the Coast Reporter. I called my housekeeper. 'I can't stand it. I wonder if I am losing my mind,' I cried."

She sent for the doctor who said that Clara must rest, or she would have a severe nervous breakdown from which she might never recover.

Paramount insisted that Clara return and complete her picture. She made one futile attempt and collapsed completely on the set.

B. P. Schulberg still did not realize that she was critically ill. He told me that he thought she had taken a dislike to some one in her picture.

"Clara is a curious child," he told me. "If things are not right on the picture she won't complain. She will jut stay at home. She has always hated to cause any unpleasantness. When I heard that she had left an unfinished picture for the second time, I wrote her a sharp letter. I told her that Paramount could not afford to suffer additional financial loss on her pictures, and that we would have to take some action.

"Clara misunderstood my letter. She thought Paramount intended to sue her. She wrote a letter that was so like Clara that it touched my heart. It read:

" 'Dear Ben: Don't sue me. I have a house at Malibu, property in Beverly, a little money in the bank, and a Rolls Royce, you can have them all'."

"CLARA."

"I am glad to have my freedom," Clara told me. "I can now take as long as I want to get well."

Plans Rest

When I saw her she was making plans to go to the Bell ranch and get well.

"Rex has a grandmother," she said. "She has been such an understanding friend."

Clara has promised those who love her to get well. There will be plenty of film offers when she is well enough to make a picture. Two of the biggest producers in the business are ready to sign her once they are sure she is strong enough to work.

"I realize since that awful day when I read those articles I haven't been well enough to make pictures," she said. "When I come back I want to be entirely well. The words 'Clara Bow Exposed' 'Clara Bow Exposed' danced before my eyes when I tried to remember my lines. I thought to myself I am better off dead. Then my father and Rex talked to me and told me I must get well—that I was only nervous and run down.

"I didn't try to commit suicide," she said, "as a New York newspaper stated. I am not religious, but I firmly believe it is wrong to try and take the life that God gave you."

On Monday Louella Parsons brings to a dramatic close the REAL life story of Clara Bow, madcap of the screen. Don't miss the thrills of this concluding installment.

MRS. NIXON :-: Beauty Reveals Threats And Broken Promises

Beauty Shadowed by Detectives; Her Children Removed From Court's Jurisdiction

More quarrels, suspicions and jealousies, culminating in their last trip together to Europe, are related in this, the eleventh installment of Mrs. Charlotte Nixon — Nirdlinger's own life story.

In previous chapters, the beauty prize winner, who was acquitted recently in Nice, France, of the murder of her husband, told of her marriage to the erratic Philadelphia theater magnate. She reviewed the details of their subsequent divorce and remarriage and of his disappearance with the children after a particularly violent scene in which he threatened her life. Then followed efforts at reconciliation and Mr. Nixon-Nirdlinger's pleas for his wife's forgiveness.

NICE.

It was not Fred's promise to change for the better that decided me to return to him. It was his threat that if I did not do so I would never see my children again. Realizing the state of mind he had been in since the automobile accident, I knew I dared not trifle with his threats.

I was urged by my friends and legal advisers to return. My attorney said he thought Fred had changed his habits and would turn over a new leaf. Besides, Judge Smathers of Atlantic City induced me to return, but only after the theatrical man had promised to bring the children back.

Tired by Strain

Judge Smathers knew well of the turbulent weeks when quarrels were so frequent that he was a constant attendant in our home, where he was summoned to help adjust matters. He knew, as did others, how I was virtually a prisoner and it was he who suggested that I be relieved of the constant scrutiny of detectives, be given a little freedom. To all of this my husband agreed.

Meanwhile I did not know where my children were. It was not until later that I discovered Fred's detectives had taken them out of the jurisdiction of Atlantic County. This was because Fred was afraid I would be able to get an order from the court for the children.

Tired and almost sick from the strain of the events I went back to St. Louis with my parents, but even then my husband was not satisfied. He wanted his chief detective to send out spies to see if I met any young men. But Fred was persuaded that if I found out about this I would never come back to him again.

When I returned to Atlantic City, after the reconciliation and the return of the children I found Fred still in an excited state, as ready as ever to suspect my every move. When again he voiced his suspicions I decided to fight back. I even packed up my clothes and left the house, intending to return to St. Louis.

Again I was persuaded to give my husband still another chance. How many chances I gave him I do not know. I felt almost frantic. I think Fred's friends—as well as my own—realized this and knew we must have a change of scenery. They advised him that he should take me and the children to Europe.

Detective Black also said he saw us depart for Europe with many misgivings. He warned me, even at the risk of his job. He knew that Fred was always armed, for more than once Fred has displayed his revolver and said he might kill me.

Again Jealous

I was so happy to have my children back that the trip to Europe at first seemed delightful. Fred seemed to be enjoying it too. Then suddenly I noticed that the old jealousy had returned. Half the nights on board were spent in mental and physical agony.

In Paris Fred's jealousy became an obsession. I was with him almost every minute and yet he was not satisfied. Time after time he flourished a revolver in my face and threatened to use it.

Finally I decided to find relief in sports. We had gone to St. Moritz, the land of the big snows. Naturally I sought companionship with friends of my own age. Fred wanted to stay in most of the time and, as I shall reveal later, he opposed my participation in all sports. His excuse was that they were "dangerous."

But he did not mean dangerous in the sense that I might get injured while skating or skiing. His twisted mind saw other things and when I would return home from a day of sport he would immediately accuse me.

As I shall explain in succeeding chapters, every day brought fresh accusations. The glint in the eyes of my husband seemed more terrible. In the middle of the night he would voice his suspicions. Slowly I realized that life was not safe. I decided something must be done to protect myself before it was too late.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Why Columnists Go Daffy

NEW YORK, June 6.

"Dear Mr. Hellinger:" writes Mrs. G. Barnes, of Oakland, Cal. "This has gone far enough. I generally enjoy your stories, whether they're true or otherwise. But now you have, in my opinion, reached the limit. By that I mean that you have begun to criticize children also. And little children at that.

"I was sitting at home the other day and reading your story of the boy who first sold flowers and then turned to newspapers. I liked that little boy because he was supporting his entire family and I was certainly enjoying the story very much. But right near the end I received the surprise of my life. After making me feel very sorry, you ended the story by saying that the boy was in for what they nowadays call a racket.

"What's the matter with you, anyhow? Is there something wrong with your head? This old world of ours is just as crooked and rotten as it can be. Are you trying to make the younger generation still worse by putting such trash in print and letting them realize how easy it is to get away with things?

"I tell you again that you should certainly be ashamed of yourself. I am not a columnist—but if I were, I certainly wouldn't exaggerate. Especially in stories relating to children. You haven't the right to go around poisoning youthful minds in that manner.

"In closing, I can only hope that you will not make such mistakes in the future. Of course, it wasn't really a mistake because I know such things can happen. As a matter of fact, something like it once happened to me, although the boy was much younger than the child in your story.

"I didn't write any stories about the little rascal who tried to cheat me. I can tell you right here and now that I shook him within an inch of his life. I wanted to bring him to court, but my husband interfered. If I could have had my way, I would have had the boy punished and the whole story exposed in the newspapers.

"I will continue to read your column. Keep up the good work."

Make up your mind, lady. Make up your mind. . . .

"YOU FAIL to comment sufficiently on news of the day," scolds Martha Coleman, of Madison, Wis. "In a recent newspaper, for instance, I saw a news note to the effect that a petrified ham had been discovered on a Kentucky farm.

"The paper said that ham was at least 100 years old. Surely you could have said something about it. Why didn't you make some comment?"

I was too close to it to speak of it, Miss Coleman. I had a bite to eat in a cabaret the other night and I will always swear that they served me a piece of it. . . .

"DEAR MARK," writes Leonard Lyons. "Will you please help me out? Don't think me silly, but just what is a month? I thought I knew until I looked at Section 30 of the General Construction Law the other afternoon. And here is what I found:

"'MONTH, COMPUTATION—A number of months after or before a certain day shall be computed by counting such number of calendar months from such day, exclusive of the calendar month in which such day occurs, and shall include the day of the month in the last month so counted having the same numerical order in days of the month as the day from which the computation is made, unless there be not so many days in the last month so counted, in which case the period computed shall expire with the last day of the month so computed.'

"What does it all mean, Mark?"

It's very simple, my dear Mr. Lyons. I'm surprised that you found it necessary to ask me. It's merely the legal way of telling you that a month is a month. Please mail me your check for $100 for advice rendered . . .

"Now, it happens that I have seen Mr. Harris on numerous occasions for the past several years. Whenever I saw him he seemed to be in want of a barber. Will you please tell me, Mr. Hellinger, why Jed Harris keeps walking around like that?"

It's very simple, sir. He does it so that fellows like you will write to fellows like me and ask why Jed Harris goes around without a shave . . .

"IF IT'S not too late," writes Morton Rann, of Bangor, Me., "I would like to submit a humorous incident that occurred around here a short time ago. I write it in connection with the story you recently printed about your tough luck with your automobile.

"A young chap was returning home one night in a Ford touring car and ran out of gas about two miles from town. He rode to town to get some gas and, when he returned to his car, found two tires stolen. Whereupon he put the gas in his car and returned home to get two tires.

"Next morning, upon going out with the tires, he found that the other two tires had been stolen. He returned home again—but after thinking it over for a day—he decided to have the machine towed in. He went back to the spot with a towing car.

"This time he discovered that someone had stolen the motor, the transmission and the differential. He left the car in disgust. And now all that stands out in the field along the road is the frame of what was originally a Ford car! If you think you had hard luck, what would you call this?"

I would call that, sir, a good piece of fiction . . .

"HERE'S a problem for you, Mark," writes Clarence Walker. "Having seen you solve so many problems for your readers, I know you'll be only too happy to give me a lift. Here we go:

"Suppose that four vehicles approach a given point, each one coming from a different angle. To be more explicit, one coming from the north; another from the south; another from the east and another from the west. The four vehicle meet at the identical moment.

"According to the law, the vehicle on the right side of the others has the right of way. But in a case like this, who has the right of way?"

That's a cinch, Clarence. The guy with the nastiest look . . .

"This was sent to me," starts an unsigned note, "and I am sending it on to you so that the chain will not be broken. Make three copies and send them to those you wish Good Luck. This chain was started by an army officer during the World War. It is going three times around the world. Do not keep it or it will bring you bad luck.

"On the fourth day after receiving this, Good Luck will befall you. It is remarkable how this prediction has come true since this chain was started. Send this and three other copies. And see what will happen to you on the fourth day."

I must be the unluckiest guy in the world. On the fourth day, my hives came back . . .

ASK SQUATTER BE EVICTED

The county's fight to evict Mrs. Helen Uptegraff, 60, "The Squatter of Old City Hall," from her "Home for Unemployed Working Girls," was on its way to court today.

The county commissioners passed a resolution yesterday to ask a court order for her eviction, claiming she obtained possession of the building under a misapprehension.

Armed with a written letter given her permission to use Old City Hall, Smithfield and Oliver avenue, for her home for girls, Mrs. Uptegraff has resisted all efforts of the commissioners to oust her for almost five weeks.

LINDY MAY FLY EAST TO JAPAN

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are considering flying to China and Japan over an eastern route, which would bring them close to the North Pole on a 6,500-mile journey to the Orient.

Col. Lindbergh is studying the possibilities of a great circle course across Greenland and Spitzenbergen instead of taking the Bering Straight route from the Pacific coast.

He is making inquiries as to fuel and supply bases and stores along that northern route. The whole plan is in a formative stage.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Heywood Broun is planning a monster benefit show for unemployed actors and says that your cooperation is vital. Call him at home . . . A Miss Winton is anxious to see you and wondered if she might, but she forwarded no address . . . A Dorothy Blake wants to know if you have "forgotten?" . . . Hmmm, Hmmm! . . . You offended Chin & Lee, the owners of the chow mein chain . . . Mr. Lee says your remark that a Mr. Silverman is the mind behind the firm is exaggerated, but that he is familiar with your "reputation for fair play" and that he feels sure you will rectify matters . . . Helen Eby Rock is well again . . . Master Rogers and his maw dined with the Capones Chewsday . . . Ran into Irving Berlin. Said to tell you he is doing a musical with Moss Hart, who coauthored "Once In a Lifetime" . . . Sam H. Harris will produce . . . Thanks again for taking me with you to "Band Wagon" . . . You're a dear.

A pleasant-voiced woman phoned. Wanted you to help her locate Gary Cooper . . . She has a daughter, she added, who is mad about Gary and wants to go some place where she may catch a glimpse of him . . . And they bake cakes . . . George S. Kaufman didn't attend the premiere of "Band Wagon." He is very ill . . . J. Byram of the Times is home from the old country and is plumper . . . Jimmy Durante is back from a five-day cruise on the Berengaria . . . He had the Prince of Wales suite for $75, and he obliged with some ditties every night . . . Joe Van Raalte is out as that firm's paragrapher . . . I have a chuckle for you . . . Recall that line in that column the other day about the couple in the restaurant who couldn't be getting a divorce as "they were cooing at the table?" Well, that wasn't his wife!

A chap representing a new air line to Atlantic City wants you to be the first passenger. They begin June 13 . . . He said not to worry; it is safe . . . I told him your answer to that always is: "Yeah, for eagles, maybe!" . . . Marc Lachman writes that he may remain in Hollywood and write some movies . . . I guess he will try to fool them, as everybody else appears to be doing . . . E. Cummings hops out of street car windows in Moscow when the conductors don't understand . . . Monta Bell of Paramount says they will make another Bankhead picture, but that it is true many were suddenly aired last week . . . Norma Shearer and baby almost missed the boat train at Bremen and had to be tossed from porter to porter to make it . . . Soap in Russia is $12.50 a cake.

The "Follies" takes to the provinces Saturday a week . . . May stay on tour three weeks—Pittsburgh, Washington and probably A. C. . . . At the McLarnin-Petrolle fight I saw more people point out Clem McCarthy as you! . . . Is your face pink? . . . I see you like "I Found a Million-Dollar Baby." Did you know that the same title was used on a song years ago? . . . You might mention that the slogan: "Reach for a vegetable instead of a sweet," was used in the advertising of Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in 1891 . . . I do not believe that Texas pawned her jewelry before she sailed for France . . . I heard Earl Carroll broadcast. He was so nervous! . . . Incidentally, his "Vanities" will include Peppy DeAlbrew, white mouse and all . . . To assure yourself of a perfect day, then, before breakfast, take one part grapefruit juice, two parts rye, one lump of ice. Stir very gently and drink it before it gets too cold . . . Swell!

Hope Hampton's new tenor was imported from Egypt . . . Have you seen the new novelty in matches? . . . They light themselves as you remove 'em. . . . People I'm Glad I'm Not: The girl in the window of that 57th St. shop demonstrating rowing machines in this weather . . . Ray Sherwin is so grateful because you showed his caricatures to the boss . . . He is another Ralph Barton, I think . . . I heard some taxi drivers talking shop in front of a night club. One of them said: "You kin always tell if the girl really likes him. She steers him away from the gyp cabs" . . . If you don't think some celebrities have great wives, how about Mrs. Chevalier, who does her own washing! . . . Your mother just phoned. Says she is well and you shouldn't worry. . . . They told me up at King Features you have several new papers in the West . . . That was an awful crack they took at Jack Osterman at the New Amsterdam, wasn't it?

N. Wells wants you to settle a bet and find out the name of the fellow smiling in the chewing gum ads in the subway . . . If you want to be of service to the city, isn't there something you can do about the Maine monument at the Circle? . . . The impressive monument isn't so impressive any more . . . The hands of the statue of the boy at the bow of the ship are broken off . . . Behind stands an angel, the fingers of which have gone to pieces . . . Seriously, the Maine monument, which is only a few years old, is in a worse condition than Roman statues 2,000 years old . . . It is being used as a playground by roughnecks, as a matter of reportorial accuracy . . . There ought to be a law?

Yolanda and Veloz, the dancers you found so enchanting at the Embassy in Miami, want you to know they are back at the St. Regis Roof . . . If you're tossing any wreaths this month please hurl one at Frances Maddux, who is in town again at the El Patio . . . She's lovely . . . Very cool spot, by the way, open air roof, etc . . . Armando Radel urges you to locate the whereabouts of Earl Carpenter and Band . . . Wasn't he last at the Casino in Havana? . . . Did you remind Mr. Moss at the Hollywood to be sure and have the prettiest girls at Steichen's? . . . Paul Sweinhart, who used to edit Zit's, is now City Ed for the Morntelly . . . Anna Fitziu is in town . . . Did you know that "Star Dust," which you only discovered recently, is at least a pair of years old? . . . Well, it is . . . It is a grand melody, anyhow, and most of the orchestras have started to use it . . . Saw Sime last night . . . He said to tell you to take it easy, and to give Walda a hug for him.

Did you notice last night the great resemblance in the profiles of the late Warren Harding and Barney Baruch? . . . Collette d'Arville, the prima donna threw another costly party at Delmonico's Monday—away up in the thousands . . . She sails today on the same liner taking the glorious Swanson . . . Have you heard the gag why the flappers always sit in the first four rows at the Paramount? Schwab and Mandel's new show was to be called "Free For All," but E. Parke Levy had used that name for a college show . . . So they settled for mazuma . . . Jack Benny thanks you very much . . . Oh, I knew I had a wow for you! . . . Remember that newcomer who got melodramatic in his opening column and said: "I charge the Broadway columnists with defaming the Street"? . . . Well, I charge him with burglary! . . . The midget gag he used today appeared in your col'm on May 9 . . . Goody, goody, clap hands for our side!—Tee, hee—R. C.

FIVE AND TEN -:- -:- By Fannie Hurst

Rarick and Jenny Crushed By Death of Son

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

CHAPTER XXVI.

To think that out of the innocent dawn of a new day could be minted the phrase, "Avery is dead." That phrase had not existed yesterday.

Twenty-four hours before Avery had been alive and, mark you, need not have died. This was not death inevitable and God's will be done. This was not death demanding.

Avery had killed himself.

There had been a small note, written in blue pencil, and stuck into a mirror in his bedroom:

"Dears, it was too much.—A."

They had followed the scent of gas and wrenched the tube from between his teeth.

"They" (a landlady and a Negro houseman in a white duck coat) had been the first to stumble across the strange and almost unendurably precious fact of the death of this life.

"They" had turned in police alarms about it.

TRUTH COVERED

And it should have been handled so privately as the slender spar of a body that had been Avery had suffered. And instead, over this wounded-to-death boy in his casket, the newspapers of the country had become a giant composite ass, braying:

SON OF FIVE-AND-TEN MULTIMILLIONAIRE KILLS SELF NEAR COLLEGE CAMPUS

Family Unable to Attribute Motive For the Suicide

Note From His Father, John G. Rarick, Forbidding Him the Purchase of a Several-Thousand-Dollar Camp-Equipment Found Among His Effects

ANOTHER COLLEGE SUICIDE

Only Son of John G. Rarick, American Chain-Store Millionaire, Discovered by Landlady

Dead From Asphyxiation

Death Attributed to Demand for Luxuries Which Were Denied Him by Self-Made Father

Let them bray. Let them bray. It was better so. It covered up the private, timid truth. The truth lay scattered in documents, some of them torn across the page; in composition books, filled with boyish scrawls; in half-written letters; in hand-written and hand-bound volumes of verse that lay in a heap on the table on which John Rarick leaned his face into his hands.

It was as if the contents of the heart of Avery, the soul and mind of Avery, unlocked from the vault of his 19 years, had been spilled there in broken utterances of torment.

This was his boy out there, [illegible] autopsy before him [illegible] of his defeat, his lightnings and ecstacy [illegible] apparently been as unfeelable as the pain, like chipped bits of cornice of the now cold marble of his being.

'Five and Ten' Synopsis

John G. Rarick, multi-millionaire chain store operator, buys a magnificent mansion after being urged by his wife, Jenny, and finds himself hating her. This is accentuated by his own inability to get close to Jennifer and Avery, his children. Jenny begins to be intrigued by Ramon Lopez, a gigolo. Avery, a college student, tires of school. Jennifer likes the handsome and rich Berry Rhodes, and Jenny urges her to try to win him. Berry kisses Jennifer while taking her to one of Leslie Edgerton's parties. Jennifer learns that Berry and Leslie had been married secretly. Ramon, saying that he has been neglecting his work to see Jenny, gets money from her. Rarick rushes to Jenny's boudoir after receiving a disturbing letter. The letter says that Jennifer is still seeing Berry. Jennifer says that she does not want to see him again. Jenny plans to go to Canada with her. Gerkes surprises Rarick by saying that he is going to marry an Eskimo and live in Alaska. Returning from Canada, Jenny and Jennifer are shocked when they learn Avery is dead.

Now Go On

There, spread over the table, in writings, were the truths that for 19 years had lain hidden from his father by the mere wall of boy-flesh.

God! God! God! That wall had been flesh of Rarick's and yet it had shut him out. The door through that wall, not 48 hours before, had been a living, breathing heart with a key to it—nobody to blame—nobody to blame—least of all Avery—except—unbearable loneliness of the thought — not even his mother had ever found the key to it. Certainly Rarick had not.

He beat with his fists upon the table, he scorched his eyes upon the revealing lines of the documents that had been brought him from his dead son's effects. He read and re-read:

This boy, then, written there on the scraps of paper, whose torment had been the strange incohate torment of poet, adolescent, dreamer and diviner, potential lover, and adventurer in Hellenic islands around which flowed the blue Mediterranean of imagination, had been the Avery of the flesh. The fledgling who had smoked the strange little hooked pipes, that looked insolent and smelled badly.

STUDIES SON'S NOTES

The Avery who had piled up card debts. The Avery whose wants, at least as interpreted by his mother, God forgive her, had been the speed motorboats, the special-body roadsters, the dressing-cases, gold-fitted, the $5,000 camping outfits, the monstrous checking accounts, polo ponies. . . .

Some lispings of what Avery had really wanted rose in faint perfume off the pages of the book of sophomoric verse which he had written in a fine, painstaking, private kind of chirography that bore no resemblance to the modish scrawl he had shown the world.

Even his very handwriting had seemed to curl inward—away—

He had tried, in those notebooks, for the perfection of the sonnet. In 14 lines, had begged the right to "walk the untessellated grandeur of simplicity." The boy who at 17 had appeared in Sunday rotogravure sections for the perfection of his riding accoutrements, wrote in plaintive, if obviously Shelleyan mood, of that "brighter freedom," and of "peace, cerulean-blue." Sang in whispered numbers among the ruled pages of the composition-books of "the pain that lies under the heart and is canker there." Rarick followed these lines with the stub of his finger, and went back again and again. "The pain that lies under the heart and is canker there . . . ."

"Avery, was that your only heritage from me.....that hurting canker there.....?"

Dears, it was too much . . . A.

What was too much? Jenny, you, up there, can you answer that? What had been too much for him? What had?

WROTE ABOUT PARENTS

His bewilderment had been too much. His frailty, his hunger, glimpsed through darting, wing-swift beauties. His desire for someone to share those moments when "pain broke like surf into starry ecstacy." Page after page of Avery, in treble, sophomoric mood, crying for a hand in his, through the aisles that were tormentingly black.....

Avery, boy, why not my hand? I would have given.....

Life had been too much for him.

Pages and pages of saying it in treble iambic and slenderly lyric sonneteering.

There was free verse, too, waddling thinly down the white sheets. "My heart is a grail of many-colored glass. It contains me—and yet—want out—translucent whiteness—"

Not bathos to Rarick, nor mewling of a spirit in the throes of trying to cast off its swaddlings. But Avery, whose heart had died wanting the Pyrenees.

And this was the boy whom his father had not dared to approach on even the matter of an experimental theater.....

This was the boy . . .

There were pages of the journal that broke the hearts when it was endurable to read them through . . . "My dear mother, who is everything to me and absolutely nothing . . ."

"When I look at my own mother and father, I realize that I have never seen anything so beautiful as their marriage is dreadful . . . there are worse lonelinesses than mine . . . whom I admire so much more than I like . . . Would like to go up to him and say . . . Look here, father— Why — why — cannot even write it—"

Say it to me now, son. It may seem too late, but not for everything. Say it to me now—

". . . Mother, now, has nothing to fall back upon but the excitements that take the place of imagination. What I cannot understand is Jennifer, who is so much more than clever, and yet to whom cleverness matters above everything—nice Jennifer who cares so terribly—about the things that are worth caring about . . . if only father would . . . if only father would—"

FRAGMENT OF LETTER

That, too, was unfinished. If only father would what? Call it back to me, Avery—if only father would what?—

There was a fragment of a letter that had apparently been crushed and torn into three pieces. A third of it was lit. It had been written to his father on the subject of a year he wished to spend in Paris.

". . . months of hesitation lie behind this request—feel the need of getting my bearings—think we could understand each other if only—my great admiration for you—hesitate to say—too much for me—time to think—alone—hesitate—unable to say to you face to face—what I—alone to think and work and dream — please don't think—beauty of ideals—please don't think—young man must believe first and—hesitate to say—father please—"

Upstairs, Jenny lay on her bed, chill after chill of crushed heart, crushed pride, crushed hope, racking her thin body. Rarick had tried his part in comforting, but everyone who appeared in the room seemed to stalk at her out of this catastrophe, so finally the doctor forbade even Rarick, or Jennifer, who sat for the most part in her bedroom, close to its pale walls, and huddled there.

Down in the library, which seemed to wrap itself grandly about this occasion, was stretched the boy out of whose incredible act had sprung the new-coined phrase, "Avery is dead," lying straight and beautiful as ivory in his casket.

"God! God! God!" cried Rarick from his clenched lips, through his clenched eyelids, down into his clenched heart. "Teach me through my failure! Avery, call back to me! . . ."

No way to turn . . .

Yet, out of all the deluge of mail and telegrams and cablegrams that came pouring through the defeated silence of that house, was one for Rarick, a Western Union message that he kept folded in his pocket and took out to re-read occasionally.

At first he had not recognized the signature:

I think I understand the thing you did not get said to Avery.

GRATTON DAVIES.

Gratton Davies? Ah, ah, yes! That likable young fellow on the committee, who had written Herod's Mask.

Somehow it was the only message out of hundreds that was to open the way for tears to work their thin, tortuous way from his clenched heart to his clenched eyelids.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Flowers Play Important Part in Romance

The Window-Box

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

"This is really a nice room—afternoon sun, Mr. —er—"

"Rollins," said Mr. Rollins.

Mrs. Honora Jerome was showing her third floor rear to Mr. James Rollins.

He didn't like the looks of the room at all.

It seemed to him that he ought to get something a great deal better for twelve a week. The bed was high-posted, to be sure, and the old tin bath had been relegated for modern equipment in the bathroom; still, he didn't care for it.

"—— most people get out early and don't see the mornin' sun much," Mrs. Honora Jerome rattled on, "but what with daylight and all they have all the late afternoons, so you'd get the sunlight and the sunsets."

Mr. Rollin crossed the room to look down into the back yard.

It was, as he thought, a dismal place, cement floor and high fence, a regulation city backyard cubicle.

"I don't——"

He was going to say that he didn't think he would take the room when he chanced to glance across to the building backing up against this one.

There sat a woman. A young woman. She was engaged in giving herself a manicure. Her hair was reddish and Mr. Rollins liked girls with reddish hair.

Her complexion was extremely fair.

The young woman was reading a magazine—a so-called humorous weekly. It was spread in front of her, held open with a hair brush.

The young woman paused in her orange stick operations to read and then she laughed.

"What's that, Mr. Rollins?"

Mr. Rollins had taken another think after seeing the woman with the reddish hair, whose room was opposite his with only a couple of narrow yards between.

SATISFIED WITH ROOM

"I was about to say that I don't believe I'll find anything more suitable," he said. "I'll have my trunk sent over."

"Very good, Mr. Rollins—$12, please."

Mrs. Honora Jerome got the $12. She beamed. Not because she got the advance—she always got that—but because the $12 came from a sizable roll of money in which her sharp eye glimpsed twenties and one fifty, at least. She could see the denomination of a bill with just one flickering glance.

"Er, what is your business, Mr. Rollins? I like to know in case anything happens, like the census taker coming."

"Nothing will happen and the census taker won't be around for nine years yet, but I have no objections to telling you—I am engaged in some research work."

"Interesting, I am sure," Mrs. Honora Jerome said, wondering to herself what the devil-and-all sort of a job this research work might be.

Mr. Rollins was eyeing the girl across the way.

Mr. Rollins' trunk arrived.

He was hanging up some clothes when he saw a man in the window across the way. He paused and stared.

Just his luck—the pretty woman with the reddish hair was married!

But, no—the man was a carpenter. He was fastening a window box for her.

She was going to have some flowers there.

Swell idea — he would also have a window box and he would grow flowers that would amaze her.

Mrs. Jerome had no objections, so long as Mr. Rollins paid for the window box.

The next day he had his window box secured below the window sill. He had personally painted it green with yellow trim. The woman with reddish hair had a solid dark, dingy green color to her window box.

She was setting out some flowers.

Ah, ha! Wasn't going to grow them from seed. All right, Mr. James Rollins would get some flowering plants.

IGNORED BY WOMAN

Some way or another he must attract this woman. The more he saw of her the more he admired her.

He stood by the window. He sat by the window. He smoked and read by the window. He leaned out. He talked to stray cats below.

The pretty woman with the reddish hair stared at him, just as she might have stared if he hadn't been there at all and the blind closed. She didn't seem to see him.

And pretty soon she had scarlet geraniums set out and some other plants.

Jim Rollins got some extremely colorful late tulips. He got some golden daffy-down-dillies, which is what he called them, and this made a brilliant display.

By this time he had named the handsome woman with the reddish hair. He called her "Cleo" because he had read, in something or other, that Cleopatra's hair had been red.

Well, Cleo's window-box plants began to be gay, white and red and some blue lupines.

Jim Rollins found that his tulips and daffodils soon faded. He got other plants.

He watered them, he used patent plant foods, he tried every way but still his window box display did not compare with that of "Cleo" across the way.

This wouldn't do. Cleo used to cast fleeting glances at his flowers but never at him, and she seemed to scorn his meager display.

But one morning this young woman stared in amazement at the window box of the man across the way.

The display looked exactly like the colored pictures in the seed catalogs.

PAYS ROOM RENT

Jim Rollins had a little watering pot. He was dabbling around with it and the young woman actually nodded and smiled at him.

Jim smiled back his very best smile and bowed and waved his hand.

The next Sunday there was a greater variety of flaming, glowing, shining blossoms in Jim Rollins' window-box than ever.

He leaned out, tending these as he smoked his cigar.

This time the beautiful lady with reddish hair greeted him with a cheerful "Good morning."

"It must be wonderful out in the country," he answered.

"It's wonderful the way you make those plants bloom—you must use some secret plant food," she called.

"Oh, no. Just a natural knack I have with flowers."

Then she withdrew.

Rollins wanted her to remain and talk.

He paid Mrs. Honora Jerome her twelve dollars the next day and she had some gossip for him.

"I got a new roomer right under you, Mr. Rollins. She was rooming across the way. She asked me about you and wondered if you'd let her examine your window-box."

Mrs. Jerome grinned.

"Say nothing about it, or what happens," Jim begged and he slipped her an extra five spot. That was enough. Mrs. Jerome was for him to the end.

"Where is she now?"

"Gone to work."

Jim stepped into his room. He gave a mighty wrench to the flower box and it fell down into the areaway below.

He went down below and took up all the plants.

"Don't say a word; let her call and then you back me up—the window-box fell of its own weight. I gave the flowers to a lame girl. Get me?"

Mrs. Jerome got him all right and grinned.

The beautiful lady with reddish hair tapped at his door that evening.

"I'm Miss Hawley, Mr. Rollins, and I do want to see those glorious flowers — why—why—what on earth?"

COUPLE MARRIED

"Accident—the box fell down of its own weight today, just before I got back. I gave the blossoms to a lame girl."

"How perfectly terrible!"

"Oh, well, I am going back to my flowers soon. It really wasn't fair, Miss Hawley. You see I learned tricks from my gardener and had some flowers sent down—here's a picture of my place up country."

He showed it to her, a beautiful old Dutch sandstone house with splendid gardens.

They became great friends. He had finished his research work and was going back to work on the biographies he was doing for a publisher. He took her up in his car the next Sunday. He hadn't lied—he had a charming place and a gardener and many flowers.

Some weeks later Jim and Edna, meaning Mr. Rollins and Miss Hawley, became aware that they were very much in love. She promised to adorn his beautiful home with him.

When they were married Jim made Mrs. Honora Jerome a little gift of appreciation, a money gift. She knew what it was for.

"Sure, I'll never open me mouth, Mr. Rollins, and thanks for your generosity. I wish all my roomers were such nice gentlemin. And I wonder would Miss Hawley be really sore at ye if she knew ye bought thim artificial flowers and stuck 'em in th' windy box just to attract her?"

"We'll keep wondering," Jim said. "We'll never tell her."

This is Mr. Sven Updyke, who has done more than any man in America to give dignity, position and standing to the minor professions. No Strike Injunctions

Labor Is Receiving Fairer Treatment in Coal Trouble, Brief Comment on Local News.

Striking miners of the Pittsburgh Coal Company have been notified to vacate their houses. Officials of the federal and state departments of labor try to effect a settlement. Most of the familiar phenomena of a great industrial dispute are in evidence. But no sheriffs' proclamations have been posted, and no injunction issued, and that is cause for satisfaction.

In former coal strikes—and indeed in nearly every great labor disturbance in Pennsylvania for years—it has been the custom of the sheriff to declare something in the nature of martial law. He took it upon himself to forbid the strikers to congregate or to do other things that it was feared might have untoward consequences. The Attorney General recently declared such proclamations were without authority of law.

It was the custom, also, for employers whose men were on strike to go into court and get injunctions restraining the strikers from doing various things. In the coal strike of 1927 one Western Pennsylvania court enjoined the strikers from singing hymns, and enjoined the union officials from disbursing strike benefits to the members! Such high-handed interference with human rights has been made more difficult by the action of the Legislature in passing bills limiting the use of injunctions in labor disputes and providing for jury trials in contempt of court cases.

Gov. Pinchot is entitled to a considerable share of the credit for the elimination of sheriffs' proclamations and drastic labor injunctions. It was he who asked the Attorney General for an opinion on the legality of the proclamations, and it was he who urged the passage of the anti-injunction legislation. Now if he would only revoke, without further delay, the commissions of the coal and iron police, the state would no longer be in league with the employers in industrial disputes, but would occupy a neutral position, as it should.

Six Westmoreland County sportsmen's clubs are urging Gov. Pinchot to veto the bills making it unlawful to kill foxes in seven counties in the vicinity of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia except by chasing them with dogs. The legislation requires payment of a special license fee for the privilege of hunting foxes with dogs. It is designed, of course, to protect foxes in the vicinity of the two cities for the exclusive pleasure of the wealthy members of hunt clubs.

Foxes prey on game and poultry, and for that rea- state has been paying a bounty to encourage their extion. During the fiscal year just ended bounties were 6,458 foxes and the year before on 7,917. It will be anomalous, to say the least, to protect foxes for the pleasure of horsemen and horsewomen in the vicinity of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, while paying a bounty on them in other parts of the state.

The sportsmen's organizations in Westmoreland County are, no doubt, actuated in asking Gov. Pinchot to veto the fox bills, by the thought that foxes are destructive of game and so should not be protected. It is doubtful if Reynard kills as many rabbits and grouse as he is suspected of killing. Rats and mice "and such small deer" comprise a good part of his food. He probably pays for at least a portion of the game he kills by his destruction of vermin.

It is rather surprising that the humane societies have not interested themselves in the fox bills; for there are not a few people who consider it wantonly cruel to kill foxes for pleasure by chasing them with dogs. In England, especially, there is strong and persistent agitation against fox-hunting with hounds on the ground that it constitutes unwarranted cruelty to animals.

Foxes are accused of killing rabbits, but they do not kill nearly as many as careless automobile drivers. The United Sportsmen's Association, which is trying to stop this slaughter of rabbits on the highways, asserts more are thus killed than are shot by hunters. It asserts further—though it is difficult to believe that people would be so cruel—that some drivers deliberately strive to run over rabbits that they meet on the roads.

Baby rabbits are now much in evidence. When they wander on the highways at night, they become blinded by the headlights of automobiles and in their confusion do not know which way to turn. If you should happen to kill one, and desire to make atonement, the United Sportsmen suggest you send $1.10 to the State Game Commission at Harrisburg. That is what it will cost the state to replace the animal.

The rally in the stock market this week and other favorable developments in business encourage the hope that the tide has turned. But the industrial depression continues, of course, one of the most pressing problems of the day. The full text of William Randolph Hearst's recent radio address, in which he discussed the causes of the unemployment situation and suggested ways through which prosperity may be restored, will be published in full in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

June is par excellence the month of weddings, and Pittsburgh has its share of them. The Gravure Section of the Sun-Telegraph will present tomorrow, in color, the portrait of a charming June bride, a well-known local society girl. There will also be shown in color reproductions of paintings by Stowitts, the exotic young American artist who went to India and caught the glamor of that country to an extraordinary degree.

Mayor Kline's approval of the ordinance author- izing the sale of Fourth of July fireworks was to be expected. The "Mayor's majority" in Council hardly would have enacted the measure if there had been any reason to suspect that Kline would have opposed it. So the fireworks dealers have won, and the civic organizations and people generally who sought to protect the children from the dangerous playthings have lost. Mayor Kline must share with his councilmanic henchmen the responsibility for mishaps that may result from the ordinance.

The Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, the oldest and largest relief organization in the city, reports commendable philanthropic activities not only in for the destitute, but also in the form of visits f families in dire straits. It would be a misfor- urgh if this splendid work should suffer from want of funds. The association depends wholly on voluntary contributions.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 6.—For about 10 days I have been shopping around at Broadway tap dance schools. In all I have taken six lessons and almost any week now you may see a bright banner fluttering in front of the Palace announcing a new vaudeville sensation—A Whistle Dancer.

It's not a thought-up act but just came natural. A few minutes after I snap into a clog I begin with no effort at all to whistle. The phenomenon results from a combination of what might be called the heaves and a gap in my bridge work. And it's more fun.

This whistle is no low cadenza from Humperdinck or anything like that. You could use it to call off a hunting dog. All I have to do is shake my feet and get out of breath and before you know it I'm tooting like a peanut stand. And, with such a talent, I've been wearing myself out working on newspapers.

I first discovered the gift taking a lesson from Billy Pierce. He demonstrated a buck and wing caper and sat in a chair to watch me. I was hitting it off first rate, thank you, and how are all your bonds, except for a little double tap with the left foot. It doesn't work so well.

Determined to master the step, I struggled hard, and all of a sudden burst out in a shrill, clear whistle. Billy got up and looked in his chair. He thought he was sitting on something. I stopped dancing, but not whistling. As I puffed I would let go a plaintive who-ee-ee-ee.

It takes about a minute for me to die down, somewhat in the manner of a slowly deflating balloon. In a 15 minute vaudeville turn I could easily take six bows and keep whistling all the while. I got so worked up about it that I trotted around to see Ned Weyburn.

I explained that as he was always on the look-out for novelties I had something that would knock his eye out. "Look!" I cried. And I went into my dance. After finishing, he commented: "You have something but I don't know what." But I heard his crack as I was leaving—"That bozo has sprung a leak."

* * *

Genius is often swatted this way. So I didn't mind but rushed home to show the folks. There is where a fellow is appreciated—in your home. Friends were there. I still have a couple. Yanking up a rug in the hall, I called to them to gather about. Again I went into my dance, winding up the castanet-like obligato with the whistle effect. Most of them laughed. My mother-in-law cried and Harry, the colored butler, knelt and prayed. Remember above where I said where a fellow was appreciated—in your home? Change that to read—in your hat.

* * *

Rather than stay to watch more of a genuine novelty they rushed off to the radio to hear a Ray Long speech at some club. They twirled the dial. But no Ray. Not even mi. Or a teeny-weeny sol. "Enjoy yourselves" I Yoricked while dolce far nienting into the bathroom, removing the mats and continuing my foot work. In a closed room that way the taps and whistles are far more pronounced. I worked out a dandy climax. After doing the routine, I wind up in a break, hold my breath and finale with two long shrill whistles. It goes like this—ta, te, ta, ta, . peep, peep! Do I seem to be breaking out with anything?

* * *

The Wright brothers tinkering in their bicycle shop and me tapping away in the seclusion of a bathroom symbolize the indifference to which trail blazers are heir. Just a little word of encouragement and I burst into bloom. Little boys at such time have mistaken me for a wild cherry tree and hacked me with hatchets. You'd be surprised how I'm all nicked up. But the disdainful glance or careless shrug and I wither like a bud in a blizzard. My eyes dim. And my tongue fuzzes up.

* * *

My new career is mottled with uncertainty. But after sitting at a typewriter for 20 years and suddenly dicovering perhaps a new way of making a living, one is likely to go ang-gang-gwa, said he laughing girlishly in the Scandinavian. At my age I do not expect to be a Will Mahoney or a Bill Robinson because—the news is bound to get out anyway—I am a bit knee sprung. Yet for an opener while the customers are being seated I believe my whistle dance has certain merit. Bring the kiddies!

Andre Ampere, Father of Electricity

By Archibald Henderson

The brilliant French scientist, Ampere, who gave such a powerful impetus to the study of electricity and magnetism, had the good fortune to make basic discoveries which came to be associated with his own name. When an International Congress of Electricians was held, at Paris, in 1881, 45 years after Ampere's death, for the purpose of adopting universal units for the fundamental quantities of electricity and magnetism, the practical unit of current was named, in honor of his researches, and their influence, the ampere.

Andre Marie Ampere was born at Lyons, France, on January 22, 1775. At an early age, he displayed the deepest interest in arithmetic, playing and calculating for hours at a time with pebbles or kidney beans. Even when he was ill, he continued his arithmetical researches. Ampere was a youthful prodigy who in later life made good the brilliant promise of his early youth. At the age of 12, he set deliberately to work to attempt to master the elaborate and complex mathematical treatises of the great mathematicians, Euler and Bernouilli, and to master as well the latin language, in which they were written, and of which he knew little or nothing.

When he reached the age of 18, he had mastered two of the greatest mathematical works of the day, Laplace's Mecanique Celeste and Lagrange's Mecanique Analytique. After his marriage, which compelled him to teach for a time for a livelihood, he made little advance in science; but better times came when he obtained the chair of physics and chemistry in the Central School of the Department of Aisne. His famous researches in electro-magnetism, however, did not begin until after he became professor of analytical calculus and mechanics at the Polytechnic School of Paris.

A report of Oersted's great discovery, made to the Institute of France, on September 11, 1820, fired Ampere with enthusiasm. He soon considerably extended Oersted's discovery; and published an extraordinary paper embodying his discoveries, entitled "A Memoir on the Mutual Attraction of Two Electric Currents."

The most notable of the consequences of these researches was that Ampere discovered a law concerning the attraction or repulsion of electric charges, and the distance between them, which was an analogue of Newton's law of universal gravitation. It was for this reason that Clerk Maxwell spoke of Ampere as the Newton of electricity.

The most epochal of all Ampere's discoveries, for magnitude of its material consequences, was the discovery of the method for making the electro-magnet. Its consequences are too immense for computation. Ampere's researches ranged over the entire field of electricity and magnetism; and he did much to explain magnetic phenomena by means of electricity.

Ampere had many of the eccentricities of genius, yet remained one of the most lovable of men. He died on June 10, 1836, and his memory will survive throughout the history of science.

Marvelous Nature

She Regulates Even the Elephants' Teeth.

HIS TUSKS GROW STRAIGHT, FOR A GOOD REASON

Seeing this big elephant you ask: "What makes his tusks so straight." You are familiar with the ancient mammoth of pre-historic days, his gigantic tusks curling upward and outward. You know the circus elephant, whose tusks came up over his trunk. This elephant, with tusks going straight down, like the digging end of a steam shovel, seems strange and unusual.

The picture, and the strange, straight tusks, prove once more nature's adaptability and wisdom.

This is an African bull elephant, inhabitant of the Congo Forest. If his tusks were spread out sideways, they would catch in the trunks and branches of trees and check his progress. Nature makes them grow straight down, close together.

With these tusks, spreading no wider than the monster's big head and wide shoulders, he can walk through the trees comfortably.

That is easily said, but how do you suppose the thing happens?

The elephant certainly cannot control the growth of his big ivory tusks. How does nature manage it? Science answers, "evolution" and adds "adaptation to environment."

PROTECTION FROM ACTINIC RAYS

The other elephant, looking something like a widow in deep mourning, proves not only the wisdom of nature, but also the wisdom of elephants.

The elephant lives in a tropical country, under sunshine, with an intense power that we, in the North, can scarcely imagine.

The powerful penetrating actinic rays of that sunshine will go through almost anything, even the dark thick hide of a forest elephant.

And, mysteriously, this elephant knows that at mid-day when the heat is too great, it is possible to mitigate the sun's cruel bombardment, by piling leaves and branches on his back, to temper the sun's fierce heat. Similarly the Englishman that hunts the elephant, puts on his head a "Helmet" of cork and light material, white on the outside to keep off the heat rays, black or dark green on the inside to keep out the actinic rays.

How could the big elephant possibly think out this plan of defense?

How could nature even by evolution or "adaptation to environment" provide the other big elephant with tusks close together for convenience in walking through the forest?

Nature and all the mysteries of creation are too much for us, and we might as well admit it.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

You've done something wrong?
That's bad.
And now you're sorry?
That's good.

Be sorry. Be so sorry that you'll get the whole thing out of your system . . . not only the wrong act itself, but the weakness that caused the wrong act. Be 100 per cent sorry all through—

AND THEN FORGET IT AND GET BUSY!

Lingering over wickedness, wallowing in remorse, isn't a virtue. It's a vice—as great a vice as the original sin.

Why was that first act wrong? Because it was silly, selfish, cowardly . . . because it was a menace and a waste. But remorse can be as great a menace and a waste.

A REFORMED SINNER CAN MAKE AS GREAT A NUISANCE OF HIMSELF, RECOUNTING AND REPENTING HIS EVIL DEEDS, AS A DOZEN DRUNKS CAN BY LAPPING UP ALCOHOL.

Personally I vote for the drunks every time. For you can enjoy yourself with some drunks, but I never knew a chronic repenter who wasn't an unmitigated blight.

In the first place, he's always an egotist. His pseudo-sorrow is but a thin mask for colossal conceit. He thinks that his particular misdemeanor is the most important happening in current history, and he spends all his waking moments contemplating it . . . or trying to make you contemplate it.

He is also lazy and cowardly. He doesn't want to face reality. He doesn't want to assume responsibilities or engage in action. And he finds a perfect escape in Remorse. THE WRONGS OF YESTERDAY OFFER A WONDERFUL ALIBI FOR DODGING THE DUTIES OF TODAY.

And it goes without saying that he's utterly selfish. It's as selfish and anti-social to spend all your time repenting as it is to spend your time killing or stealing. In either case you're not a bit of good to society and you're blocking the path of progress.

If you've done something wrong, be sorry—

BUT DON'T STAY SORRY!

Five minutes of sincere repentance will cleanse your character and put you right with God as surely as 50 years of it. Then, if you're truly sorry, it's up to you to PROVE IT.

Prove it by getting busy.

Build up a new pride to replace that old shame.

Pay off that debt by performance. For remember, every time you sin you contract a debt. You waste life. You betray trust. You two-time the whole decent human record.

You can't pay that debt by tears and prayers and handwringings. These only satisfy your own vanity. If you really want to square your record—MAKE A NEW ONE. MUFFLE YOUR MOANS . . . WIPE THE OLD CHIN . . . AND GET GOING!
